BRUSH DRAWING.

DANGER IN BRUSHES.

It is well known that hair is capable of conveying the germs of disease. Hair used in the manufacture of artists' brushes passes through many hands, and through countries where even cholera and plague are not unknown. Particularly is consumption likely to be disseminated by means of brushes, owing to the tendency of many people to point a brush between the lips.

Where foreign brushes are employed in a school it should be the urgent duty of somebody to see that each brush is properly sterilized on the premises, as there is no likelihood of this having been done in foreign workshops.

Every ounce of hair reaching Reeves' works is at once disinfected; and, further, no finished brush made by Reeves leaves their works without being first passed through a sterilizing solution.

Reeves' Brushes are the only Safe Brushes.

Extract from an article on Brush Drawing, by George Mason:

"Comparison of brushes for a period of four years:—

REEVES'.	OTHERS.
1st year, initial cost, 2½d. per child.	1st year, initial cost, 1d. per child.
2nd year, further cost, nothing per child.	2nd year, further cost, 1d. per child.
3rd year, further cost, nothing per child.	3rd year, further cost, 1d. per child.
4th year, further cost, nothing per child.	4th year, further cost, 1d. per child.

In Cost (4 years) 2½d. per child.	In Cost (4 years) 4d. per child.
In Work.—A splendid tool all the time, with "spring" and "point." Pleasure to teacher and pupil.	In Work.—Hairs always coming out. No "spring." Will not "point." Will never work well. Disgust to teacher and pupil.

The above comparison is not a fairy tale, but is based upon the experience of thousands of teachers from Land's End to John o' Groats."

PREFACE.

PARLIAMENTARY Statutes and Regulations issued by the Board of Education indicate the conditions under which Grants are made by Parliament in respect of public education throughout England and Wales. They furnish information respecting the manner in which Local Authorities must be constituted, and the procedure they must observe in the general conduct of their business. These Regulations are collected, arranged, and annotated in the N. U. T. edition of the Code.

For the manner in which these Statutory and Departmental Regulations shall be enforced, for the spirit which should actuate managers and teachers within the schools, one may consult the "Suggestions for the Consideration of Teachers and Others," issued by the Board of Education in 1905, and forming with annotations and other educational particulars the "Companion to the N. U. T. Code."

The present work is an attempt to complete the Survey of Popular Education throughout England and Wales. It is a complement of the other two, and with them may be regarded, it is hoped, as fully descriptive of English educational machinery working within the prescribed limits.

The organisation of this great national service is traced and described in the following pages from the Central Authority at Whitehall to the village school. The efforts made by Education Authorities constituted under the Act of 1902 to supply or aid the supply of education, both higher and elementary, in their several districts, are sketched in sufficient detail to enable the reader to ascertain with ease the extent and character of existing school accommodation, to note deficiencies, and to estimate with some accuracy the demands for improvement which must be satisfied if England is to maintain her place amongst the intellectual and commercial communities of the civilised world.

Particulars have been given respecting a large number of secondary schools. It is hoped that these will be of service to the general reader, particularly to parents seeking schools for their children, and of special interest to members of the teaching profession.

Several sections of the work are devoted to articles on questions of school organisation. The state of the law on these questions is described, the practice of Education Authorities at home and abroad is reproduced, and we have ventured to make suggestions which we believe are in accordance with the practice of the most enlightened Authorities, and which have the general approval of the teaching profession.

Only those who have been engaged in the collection of statistics regarding English education can appreciate the difficulty experienced in the compilation of a manual of this character. Some references are made in the Prefatory Memoranda to the various sections to the obstacles which have had to be overcome in preparing them for the press. It is sufficient to remark here that changes are being made with such surprising rapidity in almost every branch of popular education, that it is impossible to maintain accuracy up to the date of publication. It is more than probable, indeed, that publication itself will result in the production of that additional material which the most diligent search has hitherto failed to disclose.

The following works have been consulted: Statistics and Reports published by the Board of Education, the Special Reports by the Board of Education (particularly the chapters dealing with Education in Europe and in the American States), publications of the French, German, and Swiss Governments, Handbooks, Reports, and Guides published by Local Education Authorities, the Public School Year Book, the Girls' School Year Book, etc., etc. But the main part of the work has been compiled from first-hand information, for which we desire to express our very deep acknowledgments to the officials of the Board of Education, town clerks, directors and secretaries of Local Education Authorities (who, with but few exceptions, have responded to our appeals in a most generous manner), to the head teachers of a large number of schools, the members of the teaching profession serving on Education Committees, to officers of Local Educational Associations, and others. We have enjoyed full access to the records of the National Union of Teachers, and these have been of material assistance to us in preparing the various sections dealing with school organisation.

We believe that this book represents the first effort which has been made of this character in the history of English Education, and, in spite of the laborious care which has been bestowed upon its preparation, we are only too conscious of the fact that it will be readily open to criticism, that defects and inaccuracies in details may be discovered. Such defects, however, will not impair the general utility of the sections in which they may occur. The broad outlines of the picture presented will remain untouched, and any of our readers who direct attention to mistakes, or are good enough to send supplementary information, will receive the thanks, and their suggestions will have the full consideration of,

THE EDITORS.

SECTION I.

EDUCATION AUTHORITIES.

THE CENTRAL AND LOCAL ORGANISATION OF EDUCATION IN ENGLAND AND WALES.

The Board of Education was constituted by the Board of Education Act, 1899, and takes the place of the Committee of Council on Education, for many years known as the Education Department, including the Department of Science and Art. The constitution of the Board is determined by Statute, and must include those members of the Government indicated in the subjoined list. But the Board is deemed to be established on the appointment of the President thereof. The President is appointed by His Majesty, and if the person so appointed be a Member of the House of Commons, such appointment compels the President to vacate his seat and to seek re-election if he desire to return to the House of Commons. As the appointment of Parliamentary Secretary to the Board is made by the Board and not by the Crown, re-election in that case is not necessary should the person selected be a Member of the House of Commons.

The Act of 1899 empowered the Crown by Order in Council to transfer to the Board of Education certain of the duties of the Charity Commissioners and of the Board of Agriculture. This power has been exercised.

The Chief Executive Officer is the Secretary to the Board. This is a Civil Service appointment, independent of Party politics.

Consultative Committee.—The creation of this Committee was authorised by the Board of Education Act, 1899. That Act empowered the Crown by Order in Council to establish a committee consisting as to not less than two-thirds of persons qualified to represent the views of universities and other bodies interested in education, for the purpose of framing regulations for a register of teachers and of advising the Board of Education on any matter referred to the committee by the Board.

The committee was established by an Order in Council in the year 1900, amended by Order in 1907. It consists of twenty-one persons, appointed by the Crown on the nomination of the President of the Board of Education. Such persons hold office for six years. One-third of the number retire every second year.

The Teachers' Registration Council was created by Order in Council in 1902. It consists of twelve persons, six of whom are appointed by the Crown and six by certain educational organisations. Their duties are confined to giving effect to the regulations on the registration of teachers.

Local Education Authorities.—Under Section 1 of the Education Act, 1902, the Council of every county, and of every county borough, becomes a Local Education Authority. It is also provided that the Council of a borough with a population of over 10,000, and of an urban district with a population of over 20,000, shall, as respects that borough or district, be the Local Education Authority for the purposes of Part III. (Elementary Education) of the Act. In addition to this power in respect of Elementary Education these and other smaller districts have powers with regard to Higher Education, in so far as such power may be exercised by means of the proceeds of a penny rate levied in that particular district.

It will be noted that the Local Authority is the Council itself, constituted by election; in other words, the Local Governing Body takes over the control of popular education as one of its several duties.

The Act, however, requires that the Authority—i.e. the Council—shall establish an Education Committee, or Education Committees, constituted in accordance with a scheme made by the Council and approved by the Board of Education, provided that if a Council have powers in respect of Secondary Education only they may determine that an Education Committee is unnecessary in their case, and they need not then constitute a committee for the purpose of education. Whether they exercise the power they possess lies within their own discretion.

Education Committees are constituted in the following manner:—A scheme drawn up by the Local Education Authority is advertised in the district and submitted to the Board of Education for approval. The Board receive and consider objections, suggest amendments if necessary, and, on being satisfied, give approval. A date is fixed at which the scheme shall come into operation. Schemes can be revised in like manner, so that should a Council consider it necessary to revise a scheme, or should any section of the local public consider that amendment of the scheme is necessary and can so convince the Council, a new scheme can be drafted by the Council, advertised, and submitted to the Board of Education for approval, and ultimately brought into operation.

Every scheme shall provide: (a) for the appointment by the Council of at least a majority of the committee, and the persons so appointed shall be persons who are members of the council, unless, in the case of a county, the Council shall otherwise determine; (b) for the appointment by the Council, on the nomination or recommendation, where it appears desirable, of other bodies (including associations of voluntary schools) of persons of experience in education, and of persons acquainted with the needs of the various kinds of schools in the area for which the Council acts; (c) for the inclusion of women as well as men among the members of the committee; (d) for the appointment, if desirable, of members of school boards existing at the time of the passing of this Act as members of the first committee. (Sec. 17 (3) Ed. Act.)

All matters relating to the exercise by the Council of their powers under the Act of 1902, except the power of raising a rate or borrowing money, shall stand referred to the Education Committee, and the Council before exercising any such powers shall, unless in their opinion the matter is urgent, receive and consider the report of the Education Committee with respect to the matter in question. The Council may also delegate to the Education Committee, with or without any restriction or conditions as they think fit, any of their powers under this Act except the power of raising a rate or borrowing money. (Sec. 17 (2) Ed. Act.)

The powers exercised by the smaller boroughs and urban districts under Section 3 of the Education Act, 1902, are so strictly limited by the restrictions as to income set forth in the Act, that it has not been thought necessary to furnish a list of those authorities which have taken advantage of these powers. As a rule they limit themselves to supplementing in some special direction the work of the Administrative County Council in respect of Higher Education.

Managers.—Under the Education Act, 1902, Section VI., it is provided that all Public Elementary Schools provided by a County Education Authority shall have a body of Managers, of whom not exceeding four shall be appointed by the Council, and not exceeding two shall be appointed by the minor Local Authority. If the Authority be the Council of a Borough or Urban District, they may appoint such Managers as they think fit. They may refrain from appointing.

Non-provided schools must have a body of Managers, of whom four shall represent the foundation, and two shall represent the Local Authorities.

H.M. Inspectors.—Officials are employed by the Board of Education to ascertain locally whether the conditions under which Parliamentary Grants are payable are satisfied. These Officers are also entrusted with the duty of advising locally with regard to the conduct of schools and of collecting information and reporting it to the Board of Education.

THE SUPPLY

OF

POPULAR EDUCATION.

A SURVEY.

Arranged in accordance with the Authorities constituted under the Education Act, 1902.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM.

Education Committees having been established, the question naturally arises, "What are they doing?" It is a query which the ratepayer, the parent, the man in the street, all raise in vague, indefinite fashion. It is heard frequently amongst those who take but a languid interest in educational affairs. At times it is more precise. It becomes, "We know that Local Authorities are building new schools, and increasing the provision of elementary education, but what are they doing in the way of increasing the supply of Secondary Education; what are they accomplishing in the way of provision for children who, though not likely to take advantage of a secondary school, may yet do something better than the elementary school can achieve?" Or again, "What return are we obtaining for the heavy expenditure, particularly from local rates, on higher and elementary education?" Hitherto the replies furnished to these queries have been equally vague: general statements are made as to schools in course of erection, institutions opened, schemes of scholarships established, and so forth. But it has been impossible to ascertain how far the various authorities in County and Borough have attempted to give effect to that development and co-ordination of educational effort which Parliament had in view when the Act of 1902 was under consideration.

Amongst educationists inquiries respecting the work of Local Authorities, though similar in form, have a deeper significance. There is a desire to ascertain definite information as to the educational work accomplished in several districts. What are the proportions of elementary school supply under Council and Voluntary management respectively? What is being done to secure the training of teachers? How far are the defects in the supply of Secondary Education being made good, and in what manner? What proportion of the population attends secondary schools? What is the nature of the evening school provision? The questions are asked not out of idle curiosity, but with a desire to know how far efforts in one district have proved successful; in what direction they have failed, and, consequently, what steps may with advantage be taken nearer home. If the belief prevails that improvement upon local conditions is impossible, the tendency to stagnation is inevitable. A recognition of great advance made by one's neighbours is often a powerful impetus toward progress at home. The advance of technical education in England during the last decade is largely due to knowledge gained of progress made by our German competitors.

In this section an attempt is made to furnish a reply to this query—to indicate the nature of the supply of popular education within the areas controlled by the Education Authorities established under the Act of 1902.

The task has proved one of exceptional difficulty. Only those engaged in the collection of statistics respecting English education can appreciate the obstacles which are met in seeking to construct a picture of the educational supply existing in any one county.

While in some districts the Local Authority have acquired full knowledge of the position of the elementary schools, Council and Voluntary, within their area, in others that knowledge is much less exact. In many instances evening school work is largely a question of parochial effort unknown to the Central Authority. Boroughs and Urban Districts, which are not education authorities under the Act of 1902, retain and often exercise certain powers with regard to Secondary Education, and the work done by these smaller district bodies is not always within the cognisance of the chief Local Authority.

A large proportion of the supply of Secondary Education, and of that which is elementary in character but called secondary, is altogether independent of any Public Authority, and the heads of these private schools frequently refuse to furnish information. The statistics published by the Board of Education do not pretend to give particulars of existing conditions: they relate to a period of twelve months which was completed when the Board commenced the collection of statistics, a date often long prior to the date of publication. The difficulty of securing an accurate picture is increased by the rapidity with which educational conditions are changing. Not only are schools being built, and scholars daily forthcoming in greater numbers, but institutions, both private and public, are changing in character. The Higher Grade School becomes the Municipal Secondary School, the Technological Institute of one session is re-organised as a University School, with Art School and Science Classes attached. There is even difficulty over the use of names, for educational terms have not yet received exact definition, and are indifferently used by various Authorities.

Yet the inquiry, surrounded though it has been with difficulty, has furnished abundant evidence that it is only by the publication of an approximately accurate statement that one may secure greater accuracy. It is possible, indeed certain, that publication, by provoking criticism and evoking correction, will lead to accuracy, and it must also be recollected that the publication of an approximately accurate return will itself prove of assistance to those who are seeking information, always providing that any inaccuracy in detail be of such a character as to avoid the falsification of deduction. It must be recognised that a full return of the supply in any county would occupy in itself a volume. The statistics would need to be collected on the spot, and even then the material gathered in the early part of the inquiry would have slightly changed in character before the work were completed. Hence the editors do not claim for this return absolute accuracy. It is a broadly outlined impressionist picture of the conditions which prevail, an outline the details of which may be filled in when future editions appear. Its preparation would have been quite impossible but for the generous courtesy with which town and county clerks, directors of education, secretaries and members of education committees, local officials of the N.U.T., the heads of schools, public and private, have responded to our many appeals; indeed, their co-operation encourages us to hope that they appreciate the importance of securing such a return. We have not been able to respond to the wishes which many of them have expressed as to the form which the return should take. In self-defence we can only say that many of the criticisms which reached us were mutually destructive. Throughout we have indicated by the prefix of an asterisk the instances in which the returns have been corrected under the direction of a responsible official of the Local Education Authority.

Turning now to the form itself, it will be observed that we give the population and education rates, elementary and higher, and the produce of a 1d. rate. These figures alone furnish the basis for many interesting calculations. Elementary education, as the foundation of our system, is then roughly described, its separation as between Council and Voluntary schools, with the number of children attending. Special schools for the deaf and blind, &c., are indicated, and here again is an object lesson for those who have made no such provision. A comparison between the returns furnished by various districts will indicate, roughly it is true, the percentage of the population for whom such provision ought to be made. The supply of higher elementary schools is indicated. Inasmuch as evening schools are to a large extent of the nature of elementary continuation schools, they have been placed next in the list. The number of children attending such evening schools is given as nearly as the number can be ascertained, though endless confusion arises in evening school returns owing to the fact that if one student attends two classes, some authorities insist on counting such as two students; others count heads and not subjects, and every one knows how the average attendance in evening schools differs from the number of class entries. The line between evening school and technical institute is also ill-defined, but after allowance has been made for such error as is inevitable, the figures afford startling comparisons, indicating comparatively high percentages of evening school students compared with population in some districts which are well organised, and lamentable conditions in others. They are eloquent in their evidence of the results of the day school system.

In describing the supply of Secondary Education, we have grouped the schools in accordance with the titles under which they are locally known. No other form of classification is at present possible. For information as to the precise character of the schools so grouped the reader should turn to Section III., where a large number of these schools are described in detail. The term "Grammar School," although it generally connotes a certain form of curriculum and the existence of endowment, has yet been locally applied to many schools not endowed and not following the standard grammar school course. The term "College" is used without any attempt at exact definition. The great majority are under private management. Many of their pupils are drawn from outside the Local-Authority area in which the buildings are situated.

Beyond the schools included in the list there is still a large number carried on for private profit unrecognised by either the Board of Education or the Local Education Authority. Usually the attendance at such schools is very small; of many it may be said that they exploit the ignorance of parents and guardians, and they cannot be regarded as seriously affecting the question of secondary school supply.

Educational institutions of a non-local character are indicated either by their title or by the addition of the words "non-local." By an index letter the schools recognised by the Head Masters' Conference and the Head Mistresses' Conference are indicated, and the letters L.E.A. are attached to those schools which are known to be maintained by the Local Education Authority. These various indications will enable inquirers to determine for themselves the character of the local supply.

It may be useful to add that competent Authorities set the required supply of Secondary Education at not less than ten per thousand of the population. England falls far indeed below that estimate. One of the American States is reported to have secured 16·5 per thousand. The Royal Commission on Secondary Education, 1895, reported that there were twelve boys per thousand of the population requiring (not receiving) a secondary education, and this estimate was based on the assumption that parents in certain occupations, and in receipt of a certain income, should give a secondary education to their children. It will be observed that this estimate depends upon very uncertain data. A Blue Book issued in 1898 shows that in the schools to which it refers the number of boys amounted to 5·4 per thousand, and the number of girls to 4·5 per thousand.

With regard to the endowed and proprietary schools, of the seven selected counties reported on by the Secondary Education Commission, it would appear that the total number of boys per 1,000 of the population receiving a secondary education was 2·5, and of girls 1·1. The margin of error in all these calculations must be considerable, owing to the absence of accurate data, but they are sufficiently exact to show clearly that there is a very wide difference between the number who should receive an education in advance of the ordinary elementary school, and the number for whom such supply exists.

It is not our province in this Memorandum, which is merely of an explanatory character, to enter upon any discussion of the character of the supply which should be furnished. Much must depend upon the requirements of the locality; but it can be safely asserted that a very large number of children annually leave our public elementary schools who, if facilities existed, would continue their school course for some three or four more years, to the great advantage of themselves and to the benefit of the State.

N.B.—The number of Scholars given is, in Public Elementary Schools the number of pupils in average attendance, and in all other schools (unless otherwise indicated) the number of pupils on roll.

PRODUCE OF A PENNY RATE.—In Administrative Counties the property assessable for Secondary Education is greater than the property assessable for Elementary Education, inasmuch as the rateable property in Urban Districts and Non-County Boroughs responsible for the control of Elementary Education is not chargeable in respect of County expenses for Elementary Education, though such property is chargeable in respect of Secondary Education.

The figure given is (unless otherwise indicated) the produce of a 1d. rate for Elementary Education alone.

† There are a number of Schs. which figure in the L.C.C. official returns as "Higher Grade" Schs. These Schs. work under the Code of Regulations for Public Elem. Schs., but it has been thought advisable not to include them here. A separate list of such Schs., together with the number of children in average attendance is given below. A list of Higher Elementary Schs. is also given below, and they are therefore not included here. The same remark applies to "Special" Schs. for Blind, Deaf, and Defective Children. This list includes only those Schs. which are maintained by the L.C.C. Particulars of other Efficient Schs. will be found below.

§ Including P.Ts.

¶ The particulars relating to Schools or Institutions aided or maintained by the L.C.C. have been extracted from the latest returns published by that body.

§ A Council School (acc. 1,150) has just been opened. It is not yet possible to give the number of children in av. att., or to state the effect on the attendance at the Voluntary Schools.

‖ The L.E.A. have adopted the following form of organisation:—Around certain schools they have grouped other Evening Schools, which lead up to the central school. The names of the central schools are given, together with the numbers of contributory schools. Thirteen of these schools commenced this session, and it is therefore not possible to include the students attending those schools in the total number in attendance.

SECTION III.

HIGHER EDUCATION.

Detailed information respecting Schools of various types not being Public Elementary Schools.

While Section II. presents a picture approximately complete of the Supply of Education of various kinds existing in any given educational area, no attempt is there made to describe in any detail the character of the several forms which that supply assumes. Evening Schools, Pupil Teacher Centres, and Colleges for the training of Teachers are with but few exceptions conducted subject to Regulations issued by the Board of Education, and their character can consequently be ascertained from official publications.

But the Regulations for Secondary Schools issued by the Board leave to such schools a very wide discretion in the determination of almost every detail of school organisation, and hence with regard to such schools it is impossible to ascertain from the Board's Regulations the character which they assume, excepting in certain well-defined particulars. Apart, however, from schools of that type, there are schools fully recognised as institutions devoted to Higher Education, and also others which claim to be schools of a Secondary nature or are associated as Preparatory Schools with institutions of that type. An attempt is made in this Section to furnish some information in a convenient form respecting that wide area of educational effort generally known as Secondary Education. Particulars have been gathered mainly from replies kindly furnished by the Head Teachers of the schools to inquiries directly addressed to them. School Prospectuses, Reports by Professor Sadler, and Official publications have given assistance.

Something of the character of a school can generally be estimated by a knowledge of the ages at which pupils are received, at which they leave, together with the average age of the bulk of the scholars. For this purpose we have shown wherever possible the number of pupils in the school under the age of 12, between 12 and 16, and over the age of 16. Many Education Authorities consider that the four years' course of a Secondary School may occupy pupils between the age of 12 and 16. Anything below the age of 12 is usually of a preparatory character, or is in itself an intimation that the School Course, at least for those children, is below the Secondary School standard recognised by the Board of Education. On the other hand, pupils above the age of 16 are generally following a Course in excess of the Board's requirements, and their presence is an intimation that the school prepares for examinations of University rank. An estimate formed on these figures can be checked by consulting the school curriculum which follows.

The strength of the school staff may be estimated from the particulars supplied, though we are fully conscious of the fact that numerical strength and University attainments are not in themselves a full measure of teaching efficiency. It is not yet possible, however, to furnish any list likely to be of public advantage of Secondary School teachers holding a teaching diploma. We have indicated that fact where possible, but it must not be forgotten that amongst the most competent teachers at work in a Secondary School there are many who hold the Teaching Certificate of the Board of Education, and had their early training in Public Elementary Schools. Where the teachers have been good enough to furnish this information we have included it.

With great brevity we have indicated the nature of the Governing Body, the fees charged, the extent of the Endowment (if any) enjoyed, the grant in aid received from the Local Authority, and the amount of Parliamentary Grant paid to the school through the Board of Education.

We have endeavoured to so arrange particulars as to enable a parent seeking a school within a given area to find with ease those particulars which in the first instance at least will determine his choice. Usually the fee charged is an important factor. Prohibitive fees are in this Return discoverable at a glance. Other particulars with regard to the school appear in juxtaposition. Having discovered those Schools whose fees are within the Parents' means and which appear likely to give that form of training which the child requires, full details can then be obtained by sending a request for a Prospectus to the address herein indicated.

We have found it impossible to construct a form of tabulation which should provide this facility of examination and yet include particulars with regard to curriculum and scholarships. These, however, form part of the Section arranged in such a manner as to provide along with the tabulated material a fairly full description of the school in convenient form.

Schools of a non-local character have been placed in this Return within the L.E.A. area in which they are found. It would not be safe to withdraw them from the local list entirely, as though in the majority of cases they serve something more than the immediate neighbourhood, yet an inspection of such schools does disclose the fact that they draw a very large number of their pupils from the area in which they are situated, and their withdrawal from the list would materially disturb any calculations which may be made as to the nature and extent of the school supply of that district.

SECTION IV.

SECONDARY EDUCATION.

Professional Information.

We are frequently receiving applications from local authorities, teachers, and others connected with Secondary School work for information respecting the conditions under which contracts of service between teachers and Secondary School Governors are made and terminated, the salaries which such teachers receive, and the prospect they have of securing some form of superannuation. There exists, however, a widespread and peculiarly emphatic disinclination on the part of Secondary School teachers to furnish information on these subjects. As their salaries are but rarely derived entirely from public sources, they see no reason why they should disclose information which they regard as purely private and personal. The result is that when they may be able to take advantage of changed circumstances and secure an improvement in their position they are unable to obtain information to guide suitably their actions. We have, however, been able to obtain from governing bodies and teachers a large amount of information of this character, together with permission to publish it, providing that the publication be made in such a form as to prevent the disclosure of the identity of the institution or teacher concerned. An attempt is made in the following pages to provide the information without violating the conditions which have been imposed.

The general arrangement in accordance with local authority areas has been preserved, but in this table these authorities do not follow each other in their customary order. We, however, preserve a key to the arrangement, in order that alterations may be made in future editions.

While deleting the name of both district and school, it has been found necessary to provide some method which would enable useful comparisons to be instituted. Those who are engaged in a Municipal Secondary School are not keenly interested in the organisation of a long-established Grammar School and vice versa.

Secondary Schools differ from each other so considerably in curricula, ages of scholars, appointment, fees, and so forth, that accurate classification becomes impossible. Yet the particulars which we have collected will prove quite useless unless some attempt be made to ensure that comparisons when instituted are made between institutions similar if not identical in character.

The following rough arrangement has, therefore, been adopted:—

Schools which are maintained and controlled by a Local Education Authority are so indicated by the prefixed letters L. E. A.

The letter "a" prefixed to a Secondary School indicates that it is a school recognised by the Head Masters' Conference or the Head Mistresses' Conference.

The letter "b" indicates that—

(1) The school is governed by a recognised educational body, or

(2) That the number of scholars over sixteen exceeds the number of scholars under twelve, and there are other evidences that the school is one of higher type.

The letter "c" indicates a Secondary School which reaches a fair average standard in organisation and curriculum, so far as the materials at our disposal will enable us to form a judgment.

It goes without saying that classification of this character excludes a very large number of private Secondary Schools, many of which may be quite equal to those which find a place in the list. Their inclusion may be attempted when we are able to secure sufficient information to enable us to arrange them with some approach to exactitude.

It will be further noted that the object with which this return is presented is fully achieved by giving particulars respecting typical schools in various districts. Thus, from it can be ascertained with ease the fact that in a certain number of schools of a particular type the teaching staff may be appointed and dismissed in a given manner. Such changes may be effected by the sole action of the Head Master, or subject to the approval of the governing body, or by the governing body on the recommendation of the Head Master. The Return will show that there are schools, few in number at present, where members of the teaching staff are entitled under certain conditions to superannuation, and those who desire to ascertain the salaries paid to teachers in various types of Secondary Schools, the minima and maxima, the variations between the salaries of Junior and Senior Form Masters, will find such particulars readily available.

The attempts which we have made continuously during recent years to meet the requirements of Secondary School teachers have convinced us that a return of this character can be very profitably used. These efforts have also shown us that nothing but the experience acquired by the publication of the return will enable us to make satisfactory amendments.

REGULATIONS

FOR THE

CONDUCT OF SCHOOLS.

SECTIONS V. TO XI.

The practice adopted by certain Local Authorities of publishing a large number of detailed Regulations, to be observed by all connected with their schools, is open to grave abuse. In the interests of the orderly and expeditious despatch of business, it is no doubt necessary to formulate Regulations upon some of the more important features of school life. But, as a rule, Local Education Authorities have recognised that any attempt to go beyond that which is essential, and to strive to frame Regulations which shall cover every conceivable incident in school life, must result in the infliction of serious injury upon the schools. If teachers are fit to discharge the responsible task of training the children committed to their care without the direction of a multitude of Regulations, they are equally capable of fulfilling their other duties associated with the school, many of which are best dealt with by the exercise of intelligence and common sense.

Multitudinous Regulations rob the schools of elasticity and deprive the teachers of interest in their work, for, if private judgment may never be exercised, but must invariably give way to a published Regulation, the habit of thinking out the best way of meeting difficulties falls into disuse, the teacher becomes more or less of a machine, and the education of the children necessarily suffers.

The seven sections which follow furnish a few notes upon those questions which are generally the subject of Regulation by Local Authorities.

SECTION V.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The object of this note is constructive rather than critical. Those for whom it is intended are familiar with the condition of school attendance, and the consequences of irregularity. Perhaps, however, it may not be amiss to remind those who are not in daily touch with the schools that the irregular children constitute a comparatively small minority of those on the register. But this minority is persistently irregular. Yet the regular children who constitute the majority suffer almost as much from the casual attendance of the irregular children as do the actual offenders themselves. Hence, when the effect of remedial measures is considered, the benefit to the majority, rather than the punishment of the minority, should be the determining factor.

Its Financial Aspect.—Annual Parliamentary Grants, the Fee Grant, and the Aid Grant under the Act of 1902, are payable upon the average attendance, and it appears probable that in certain counties it is possible to secure an increase in attendance sufficiently large to so increase the Parliamentary grants as to pay for the whole cost of the machinery for enforcing attendance.

Attendance Law.—Attendance is regulated by (1) Act of Parliament; (2) Bye-Laws made by Local Attendance Authorities. Children must comply with both, and meet whichever requirement may be the higher.

No Compulsion (1) Before the age of five; and where the Local Education Authority have so determined in the case of any school maintained by them, children who are under five years of age may be refused admission to that school; (2) After the age of fourteen.

Compulsion absolute between the ages of five and twelve. (Exception.—The Agricultural Clause of Robson's Act, if included in the local bye-law.)

Half-Time.—Half-time exemption may be secured at the age of twelve if the local bye-law makes provision for it. Such provision must require twelve years of age and the local standard of proficiency, or, in lieu of a proficiency standard, 300 attendances in not more than two schools in each year for five preceding years, whether consecutive or not.

Full Time.—Total exemption may be secured at the age of twelve on passing full-time bye-law standard. If bye-laws do not extend to the age of fourteen, then between the maximum bye-law age and fourteen, full-time exemption may be claimed at thirteen if Standard IV. or a higher standard has been passed, or if 350 attendances have been made for each of five years in not more than two schools.

Children who have taken advantage of any bye-law permitting half-time at the age of eleven cannot claim full-time exemption until the age of thirteen.

Local bye-laws may exclude total exemption up to the age of fourteen unless the child has passed the full-time Standard (bye-law), and this may be the Seventh.

(N.B.—Between the age of twelve and thirteen there can be no employment in a factory, laundry, workshop, or mine, on a standard qualification lower than the fifth; nor may such children be employed underground at all.)

A partial exemption bye-law is never approved except on the condition that it is granted for the purpose of beneficial employment.

It is important to notice that if the local bye-laws are in advance of statutory regulations, the child must satisfy the bye-law. If, on the other hand, antiquated bye-laws have been superseded by legislation, the child must satisfy the latter.

Statutory Regulations.—These are beyond the scope of the Local Authority, but it must be recollected that where exemption from attendance is permitted under certain statutory regulations, it does not follow that the Local Authority must construct a bye-law to that effect; and if there be no bye-law with regard to exemption, the Statute does not operate, and no exemption can exist.

Local Bye-laws.—As a consequence of the Act of 1902, the school attendance problem has been simplified by the unification of bye-laws throughout large areas. During the last six years bye-laws covering the greater part of the country have been submitted to the Board of Education and have received approval. The majority of the changes have been of a progressive character. The age of fourteen as a qualification for total exemption has been very generally adopted. The standard approved for total exemption is in only one case lower than the Fifth, nor with very few exceptions is that for partial exemption lower than the Fourth. But both these standards are far too low. The majority of the great progressive authorities have adopted the age of fourteen or a pass in the Seventh Standard as the requirement for total exemption, and declined to frame any bye-law dealing with partial exemption, and in nearly every instance this reform has been accomplished without a murmur of dissent.

Several of the administrative counties have scheduled districts under their control, and have so drafted their bye-laws that the standard of exemption varies in different portions of the area. In such cases it has been the rule to construct only two divisions, certain urban areas being scheduled for the application of a bye-law of a higher educational value than the remainder of the district. This plan possesses the advantage of enabling the Local Authority to maintain the high standard which they found had been established by their predecessors (the School Board), and such maintenance often encourages the application of a similar bye-law to the rural area.

It should be recollected that should a Local Authority determine to revise existing bye-laws the labour of draftsmanship may be reduced to a minimum by consulting the draft form issued by the Board of Education. There are but few principles to be determined in connection with such bye-laws, and there is no reason why bye-laws which have not been recently revised should not come under immediate inspection with the object of bringing them up to the general standard observed throughout the country.

The advance in public opinion during the last few years towards the age of fourteen as the sole qualification for exemption of any kind from the school has been remarkable.

Under a revised form of bye-law a child withdrawn from religious instruction may also be withdrawn from the school. Local Authorities are not bound to adopt the bye-law in this form. They may omit all reference to it, leaving the conscience clause to operate as it has done for the last thirty-six years. Whether the bye-law should be adopted in its new form must depend on local circumstances. Experience has shown that advantage is already being taken of it to keep children away from school during the first hour of each day, generally for domestic purposes, without reference to religious teaching, and school discipline suffers accordingly. To obviate this it is suggested that where the bye-law is adopted an attempt should be made to have religious instruction taken as the last lesson in the morning session.

Organisation.—In large urban districts one attendance committee is sufficient. In counties it may be necessary to appoint district committees for detail work, but the responsibility for general organisation, and particularly for prosecutions, should rest with the central authority. The committee, whether central or district, should meet frequently on well-known dates to deal promptly with all cases reported. They should recollect that there is no warrant for the notion, far too prevalent, that every child is allowed two half-days off per week. It is this inexcusable leniency with the parents of children who habitually are away their two half-days which leads to the more difficult cases, and makes the attendance problem one of such magnitude. It should not be forgotten that in many parts of the Continent unexcused absence on two half-days per month inevitably leads to prosecution.

Attendance committees should carefully inquire into the validity of the excuses offered, and not decide simply upon the number of times a child has been absent during a given number of weeks. It is possible that the parent of a child who has been absent ten times in five weeks—that is, has lost one week out of the five—may be more deserving of punishment than one whose child has been absent more frequently, and the practice of taking into Court only the most irregular in point of number is reprehensible.

Attendance Officers.—The idea that anybody will do for an attendance officer ought by this time to be exploded. They should be tactful, but determined. A few words to a thoughtless mother may prevent many prosecutions. They must be impartial as between parent and parent, and school and school. They should learn to know their cases, and hunt them down systematically.

It is useless to expect them to properly work an area too large, and their whole time should be devoted to their work. To attempt it in spare time is too frequently to leave it undone.

Teachers' Duties.—If the Local Authority would decide that no excuse for absence can be accepted unless a note be presented on behalf of the parents at the school at the time the registers are marked, considerable difficulty and labour would be at once removed. Certainly in urban districts the parents of a child unable to attend can almost always find some other child who could take such a note to the school, and generally this is the case in rural districts. This practice is enforced in many parts of Germany and Switzerland. It often enables the attendance officer to deal with the absent child before the meeting of the school terminates. The attempt to keep the child at home is unsuccessful. It is useless to repeat it. With us the attempt frequently succeeds, and the possibility of punishment is far too remote.

Marking Registers.—Cannot local authorities unite in an effort to induce the Board of Education to drop the demand for marking registers on account of the children who are present? The absent mark and the number present are quite sufficient for all returns, and as effectively prevent fraud as the present method. In a school of several classes and few teachers an enormous amount of time is wasted in marking the children who are present.

The Slip System.—A plan better than that of sending children after absentees or demanding a note from the parent is known as the "slip system," which has been adopted with marked success in Leicester and elsewhere. It may be thus briefly described:—

A central school is selected in each officer's district, and to this school the officer proceeds each morning and, if possible, each afternoon also. A separate form is filled up for each case by the class teacher, upon which is given the name and address of every absentee, together with his or her attendances for the four previous weeks, and any special circumstances known to the teacher. This is done immediately the registers are closed, and the forms are promptly forwarded by messenger to the central school. The cases are at once arranged by the officer in street order for visitation. This process occupies very little time, and the officer is enabled to spend most of his time in the streets. When the street work is completed the officer at once proceeds to the central office and performs any clerical work which may be necessary, and records his proposed movements for the following day to enable the street superintendent to find him if necessary.

Weekly Returns.—Managers must furnish the attendance officer with such statement respecting attendances as the authority may require, or the authority may demand full freedom for the officer to inspect the registers. The former is the better plan. But in carrying it out some authorities are making the grave mistake of needlessly increasing the labours of the teacher, and this, too, without any commensurate gain. They have supplied the teachers with a form of return to be filled in every Friday afternoon with respect to every child absent more than a given number of times, and with respect to every child, his name, address, guardian's name and occupation, and other particulars must be written. A child who is absent with typhoid fever will have these particulars written in probably for thirteen weeks in succession, though every one knows that the child is in bed It must be recollected that the irregular children are persistently irregular, and hence the same names and same addresses are written every week. And then, after all, the paper shows only one week of attendance; it gives no record of the child over a long period.

Duplicate registers are far preferable in rural districts. In these the names and addresses are written once every quarter, guardians' names written only when they are not the parents of the child. If then it be also agreed that in filling up these registers on Friday afternoon, those who have attended full time should pass unnoted, and those who have attended full time, less the number of times excused by the teacher, should also remain unnoted, then there would be a return extending over three months of all the irregular children with which the teacher may be dissatisfied. This duplicate can be sent to the attendance officer every Friday. It should be incumbent on him to return it to the school not later than the following Wednesday, indicating thereon the results of his visits to the parents, and while it is undesirable to encourage complaints by teachers of attendance officers, or vice versâ, teachers should have not merely the power, but the duty of reporting to the Attendance Committee any systematic failure to record the results of such visits.

Special Courts.—The changes in our educational system, brought about by the Act of 1902, render possible a reform which many educationists have long ardently desired. There should be no difficulty in the county or town council making arrangements for a special court to be held at convenient place and hour to deal with attendance cases. Parents frequently attend existing courts with their children, or send their children to explain the absence of the parent. It is eminently desirable that an effort should be made to keep these parents, and particularly their children, free from that contact with criminality which is inseparable from the proceedings of the ordinary police-court. Special courts for dealing with youthful offenders exist in many British Colonies, and the plan has already been adopted with marked success by several Local Education Authorities in England.

Attendance cases should not be left to be taken at the close of a long day of police work. They need careful attention, a wise discrimination, an impressive procedure.

Prosecutions.—It is recommended that when it becomes necessary to prosecute a parent for the non-attendance of a child, proceedings should be taken under statute rather than under bye-law. When this is done, subsequent proceedings are simplified and rendered more effective.

Encouragement to Attendance.—A well-equipped school and intelligent teachers are the best encouragements any Authority can offer to the children. Medals for perfect attendance sometimes produce phenomenal results and much serious illness. It is a system only possible in the hands of a strong-minded teacher, for it is an unpleasant duty to send home a child who has come wrapped in a blanket. Prizes and attendance cards are familiar enough to all. Used discreetly they are helpful; scattered broadcast they are most objectionable.

The Local Authority should aim at cultivating the idea that to send a child regularly to school is one of the first duties imposed on every citizen, and the child should early understand that he must attend.

REGULATIONS ADOPTED BY LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

Bucks.—Notice to be sent by head teacher, in the case of a scholar's absence, to the parents on form provided, but teachers are at liberty to use any other means for securing regular attendance not expressly forbidden. Under no circumstances are teachers to send children during school hours to inquire after absentees, nor must children be sent where there is any suspicion of infectious disease.

Weekly returns of the attendance of each child must be sent to the school attendance officer every Friday on form provided. Teachers must use all persuasive means in their power for securing improvement in the attendance of the child. Teachers must sign attendance certificates when required to do so by the attendance officers. In the absence of the head teacher, the assistant in charge must sign as the principal teacher.

Jarrow.—The attendance officers will attend at the schools at 9.40 a.m. and 2 p.m. on certain days to be arranged, for lists of absentees. The morning list should be returned to the head teacher at 2 p.m., and the afternoon list on the following morning. It is not desirable that the officers be sent after children who as a rule make 10 attendances per week.

When the foregoing system is impracticable or unnecessary, lists of irregular attenders should be forwarded to the Clerk of the Board on the Monday and Thursday evenings in each week. The lists will be returned to the head teachers by the attendance officer on the following day.

Tynemouth.—Each officer shall attend a school in his Group at 9 a.m., and obtain from the head teachers the names of children whom they require to be visited. Each school in the Group shall be visited in turn. Reports shall be sent to the schools not later than the close of the day of visitation.

Essex.—School attendance officers must make periodical reports of all cases of default to the school attendance committee, and to the local advisory sub-committee, and attend meetings of both committees and take directions as to prosecutions, and act in accordance therewith.

The attendance officer must visit each school at least once a week in urban, and once a fortnight in rural districts, and head teachers are to be notified that, if failure be made in that respect, they are without delay to report the omission to the clerk of the local advisory sub-committee.

The attendance officer must visit the home of the parent or guardian of any child not attending school, in order to ascertain the reason for non-attendance, and to warn the parent or guardian of the legal consequences which may follow if the child's attendance does not become regular. If illness be alleged as the cause of the irregularity, the officer must satisfy himself as to the accuracy of the allegation. In cases of doubt the attendance committee or the local advisory sub-committee should require the production of a medical certificate as to the existence of illness, and may pay the fee of the medical attendant for obtaining the certificate. Careful watch must be kept for cases of illegal employment.

Bournemouth.—Duplicate registers are supplied for the use of the attendance officer.

Hastings.—Registers to be closed immediately after religious instruction, and the names of absentees, with addresses, to be at once forwarded to the central school of the district. Attendance officers shall be waiting, and shall arrange the names of absentees in street order, and shall visit every absentee, unless a satisfactory reason for absence is known. The list of absentees, with officer's remarks on each case, shall be returned to the head teacher the day succeeding that on which sent. Names of children absent with reasonable excuse are not to be included in these lists. Afternoon absentees should have the letter A placed after their names, which should be sent to the central school next morning.

Leeds, West Ham, and Leicester have adopted the slip system, similar to that described in the Hastings regulation quoted above.

COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE.

The Practice in some Other Countries.

N.B.—The following notes on education in other countries have been taken from sources which the Editors have every reason to accept as reliable. But as changes take place in educational law and practice abroad as well as at home, it is not possible to say that these statements are now in every respect exact, though the Editors have no reason to doubt their accuracy.

Canada.—Ontario.—All children between the ages of 8 and 14 are compelled to attend school for the full term during which the school is open. Reasonable excuses for non-attendance are—(1) That the child is under efficient instruction at home; (2) that he is unable to attend through sickness or other unavoidable cause; (3) that he is excused by a Justice of the Peace or by the Principal of the school; (4) that he has passed the High School Entrance Examination, and is attending such school. Any person employing a child under 14 years of age during school hours is liable to a penalty of 20 dollars. When the services of the child are deemed urgent an absence from the school for six weeks of the term may be granted. Truant officers must be appointed for every city, town, village, or school section. They are vested with police powers, and have authority to enter factories, workshops, stores, and other places where children may be employed, and ascertain whether there is any violation of the Act. Regulations may be made by the local authorities for the better enforcement of the statute.

United States.—In thirty States attendance is compulsory. In Indiana the statutory period is from 6 to 14, in Pennsylvania from 6 to 16, in Wisconsin 7 to 13, in Massachusetts, Kentucky, Illinois, and N. Dakota 7 to 14, in Maine and Rhode Island 7 to 15, in Connecticut, Michigan, and Wyoming 7 to 16, in New Hampshire, Vermont, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, District of Columbia, W. Virginia, S. Dakota, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, and Oregon 8 to 14, in Washington 8 to 15, and in New York, Ohio, Minnesota, and New Mexico 8 to 16—that is

The length of the compulsory school term varies from 70 days per annum in North Carolina to 189 days per annum in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

In Minnesota "Factory Law" prohibits the employment of children under 14 years of age who have not attended school at least 12 weeks during the year.

Fourteen States have no legislative enactments on this matter, and for five States no information is available.

The age limits for free attendance are as follows:—Wisconsin 4 to 20, Rhode Island and New Hampshire over 5, Maryland and Michigan 5 to 20, Maine, Vermont, New York, Virginia, Mississippi, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, New Mexico, and Idaho 5 to 21, District of Columbia 6 to 17, Louisiana, Utah, and Nevada 6 to 18, Kentucky and N. Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Washington, Oregon 6 to 21, Alabama 7 to 21, Texas 8 to 17, Massachusetts no limit, Connecticut no limit fixed by law.

Australia.—New South Wales.—All children between 6 and 14 years of age must attend school not less than 70 days in each half year, unless exempt on account of (a) being under regular and efficient instruction elsewhere, (b) sickness or other unavoidable cause, (c) non-existence of any school within two miles, (d) having reached a prescribed standard of general education.

Western Australia.—Every child of not less than six or more than fourteen must attend an efficient school on the days on which the school is open. The following are "reasonable excuses" for non-attendance: (1) That the child is under efficient instruction elsewhere (whether such instruction is efficient or not shall be decided by the Minister, who may require the report of an Inspector of Schools thereon), (2) that the child is prevented by sickness or other unavoidable cause (but such excuse shall not be entertained unless the parent has given the teacher notice thereon in writing within seven days after the occurrence of such prevention, and a medical certificate produced if required). The Minister may, at his discretion, excuse from attendance children who are required to help in the fields at harvest time, or other special periods of the year. Attendance officers are empowered to accost children in the streets or other public places, and obtain the names and addresses of those apparently not in attendance at schools.

Denmark.—Children generally leave the elementary schools at the age of fourteen.

France.—The Certificate of Elementary Studies (Leaving Certificate), which exempts from further attendance, can now be obtained at the age of eleven on passing successfully an examination in elementary subjects. No pupil can enter a higher primary school unless he holds this certificate.

Hungary.—All parents and guardians are compelled to send their children to school from their sixth to their fifteenth year, unless special arrangements are made for home education. Until the twelfth year a child must attend an elementary school, and then until the fifteenth year a revision school, unless he has entered on a course of secondary education. Fines are enforced in the case of non-compliance, which are doubled in amount for each successive offence. Children educated at home must produce a certificate to show that they are being properly educated, and they are required to attend an annual public examination in the public schools.

Netherlands.—Every child must attend school as soon as it has reached the age of 7, and must remain for six years as a pupil of a primary school, and go through all the classes, or when instruction is given in classes which take up longer time than six years the child must pass through so many classes as include a period of six years, providing that in the last case the obligation does not cease until the child has reached the age of 12, and has passed through the class in which it was placed on reaching that age. The obligation to attend ceases in any case if the child has passed through the class in which it was placed on reaching the age of 13. There are no half-time schools. But the local inspector may grant a temporary exemption from attendance at school in behalf of work in or for the occupation of agriculture, gardening, tending cattle, &c., to children who in the last six months preceding the application have regularly attended school for not more then six weeks only, not reckoning the vacations. A child is considered to have attended regularly who for two consecutive months has not been absent on more than two occasions without reasonable excuse. A child must be at least ten years old before it can obtain such leave of absence, and there must be substantial reasons for the application.

New Zealand.—Attendance is compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 13, and the public elementary schools are open to all children between the ages of 5 and 15.

Norway.—There is no obligation to attend the public primary school, but the obligation of attendance exists in that every child between 8 and 15 in the country, and between 7 and 15 in the towns, who is not in receipt of instruction calculated to bring it up to the standard of the primary school instruction within its fifteenth year, is referred to the primary school, and the attendance of the child there can be enforced by a fine imposed upon the parents or guardians.

Portugal.—Elementary instruction is divided into two grades. In the first grade attendance is compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 12. Attendance in the second grade is a condition of admittance to secondary and technical schools. Children living more than a mile from the school, or who can prove that they are receiving equivalent instruction elsewhere, are exempted from attendance All elementary instruction is free.

Prussia.—The State takes cognisance of all elementary instruction, public and private. Private schools are systematically inspected, and inspectors have power to acquire into the instruction given to children in their own homes. The "school age" has become fixed at six to fourteen, not by any general law, but partly by separate laws affecting various parts of the kingdom, and partly by the practice of the Regierungen as confirmed by legal decisions. Children are admitted in the towns usually twice a year—at Easter and Michaelmas, and in the country once a year—at Easter. If the child's sixth birthday falls before June 1st he has to go to school at Easter in the same year; if after June 1st, at the succeeding Easter. He is released from school at the corresponding date eight years later. Very few exceptions are allowed, but in rare cases a child is permitted to defer entering on account of bodily weakness, or to leave in the course of his last year on the ground of poverty or other pressing circumstances. The total number of these exceptions is only 1·28 per cent. of the number of enrolled children.

Sweden.—Attendance is compulsory from the completion of the child's seventh year to the completion of his fourteenth year, but even then he is not exempt unless he has attained the required standard. Children being educated at any public or private institution giving instruction similar to the primary schools, and children efficiently educated at home, may be exempted by the School Board from attendance at the public schools, but children must not be kept away from school by their parents or by any employment, and employers of children of school age must so arrange their hours that they do not interfere with the school time.

Switzerland.—The employment of children in factories throughout all Switzerland before the completion of their fourteenth year is forbidden, and for children in their fifteenth and sixteenth years the work in the factory together with the time given to the school and to religious instruction must not exceed eleven hours in the day. The limit of age for compulsory attendance is fixed by the individual cantons. In some attendance is compulsory between the ages of six and fifteen years, and in many cantons evening schools are compulsory.

Zurich.—Every child must attend school from May 1st following its sixth birthday until he has reached the age of fourteen. The school attended may be either a public or a private school, but all schools, public or private, are under Government supervision. The general course is for each child to attend the public school in its own ward to which it is assigned by the authorities For six years the child remains in the primary school with children of either sex and of every social rank. At the age of twelve the parents may select such course of training as they consider desirable. Three courses are open. The child may be sent to (1) the boys' high school (not free), (2) the higher grade school (free), or (3) Classes VII. and VIII. of the primary school (free).

ATTENDANCE AT CONTINUATION SCHOOLS.

PRACTICE IN SOME OTHER COUNTRIES.

Saxony Continuation Schools.—After leaving the elementary school, which is usually about the age of fourteen, attendance for three years at a continuation school is compulsory for boys, and any communal body may make attendance obligatory for all male workers in their district up to the age of eighteen. The masters in any branch of industry are bound to allow their workers under the age of eighteen the time fixed by the authorities as necessary for instruction in the continuation schools. Any breach of this law is punished by a fine not exceeding twenty marks, or three days' imprisonment. The period of attendance is either for two hours a week all the year round or four hours a week in the winter half-year. Local School Committees have the power to extend the time to six hours. They may also establish compulsory attendance for girls for two years.

Exemption from these requirements is only granted to scholars who have regularly attended a higher grade elementary school up to the completion of the fifteenth year of the scholar's age, or in exceptional cases the Board of Management of the school can free a scholar from attending on account of exceptional ability and maturity. A decision, as to the proper standard of education having been reached, is to be made by the teacher in conjunction with the Local Inspector or Director, and every such case must be reported to the District Inspector. Absence at home or trade employment is never accepted as as an excuse for exemption.

Switzerland.—If the authority decide to have adult courses they must be compulsory. The register of attendance is kept by each teacher, and at the end of the month the total of unexcused absences is forwarded by the School Commission to the Cantonal Police Bureau in the neighbouring town, they in turn set in motion the police in the commune, and the fine is claimed or a summons to the County Court is presented as the case may be. For the adult course the fine is 20 cents. for each hour missed. The young workman can, it is true, earn more than this sum during the hours missed, but there are court fees in addition, and fees are cumulative, and there is the nuisance of going to the court in the town during work hours. So that the compulsory system is very fairly effective.

Zurich.—The School of Industries, where instruction is free, corresponds roughly to one of our evening schools of science and art. Employers send their apprentices to the school twice a week for the whole morning (7 a.m. to noon). There are also commercial continuation classes, and employers grant their apprentices leave from business hours to the extent of four hours per week, and the apprentices make a corresponding sacrifice of their leisure.

Netherlands.—The commune is obliged, as far as possible, to establish adult continuation schools for all those who have completed the course of ordinary primary instruction in public schools. The course of study is merely a repetition of the subjects taught in primary schools, but it may be extended by the addition to the regular course of these subjects which are merely optional in the primary schools. These continuation schools are under Government inspection.

ATTENDANCE BYE-LAWS

ADOPTED BY

EDUCATION AUTHORITIES

ENGLAND AND WALES,

WITH

INFORMATION RESPECTING SPECIAL COURTS FOR HEARING NON-ATTENDANCE CASES, AND BYE-LAWS ADOPTED UNDER THE EMPLOYMENT CHILDREN ACT, 1903.

ABBREVIATIONS.

(1) AGE AND STANDARD QUALIFYING FOR TOTAL EXEMPTION.—Column 1.—The (*) indicates that the Bye-laws provide for the total exemption (if beneficially employed only) of children between 13 and 14 who have obtained Certificates that they have made 350 attendances after 5 years of age in not more than two schools during each year for five years, whether consecutive or not.

(2) AGE AND STANDARD QUALIFYING FOR HALF-TIME EXEMPTION. Column 2.—To claim half-time exemption a child must have reached the standard specified, or have made 300 attendances in not more than two schools in each year for five preceding years, whether consecutive or not.

(3) Is the Agricultural Bye-law included, and if so, what is the standard specified?

(4) Is the new form of the Conscience Clause (allowing the withdrawal of a child from the school premises during Religious Instruction) included.

(5) Number of miles from a child's home to the school, residence beyond which shall be regarded as a reasonable excuse for non-attendance.

(6) Have Bye-laws been adopted under the Employment of Children Act, 1903?

(7) Are Special Courts established for the hearing of non-attendance cases?

a. Bye-laws adopted by the New Authority.

b. Bye-laws of the late School Board (or Attendance Committee) still in operation.

Un. Con.—Under consideration.

SCHOOL MATERIAL.

The methods under which Local Authorities maintain the supply of school material necessarily differ according to local circumstances. Where the whole of the schools of an Authority are within easy reach of a central office it is possible to arrange for prompt delivery direct from the publishers, or to concentrate stores and supply the schools as demand arises.

In Administrative County areas other methods must necessarily prevail.

The following notes are founded on the experience of a large number of Authorities. They indicate risks to be avoided and plans which are successful:—

Quality of Material.—Any regulations on this subject should have for their object primarily the sufficient supply to every school within the district of school material of modern pattern and of good quality. In the struggle after economy there is a great danger that quality may be sacrificed, and the schools supplied with articles so unsatisfactory in quality as to render thoroughly efficient instruction an impossibility. No economist would desire to create such a position, but as many members of Education Committees are unfamiliar with some of the materials required for school work, this danger may easily arise. It is hoped that managers will request the teachers to acquaint them if any deterioration in the standard of quality be noticed.

Contracts.—Local Authorities often contract with one or more publishing firms for the supply of school material at special rates. It is desirable that these contracts should be spread over at least three or four firms, and in no case should they be exclusive. Competition between firm and firm will maintain a high standard of quality, and the Local Authority should reserve the right to freely purchase outside the contracting firm. There is already some evidence that under the contracting system the quality of school materials may fall off, and such a decline should be dealt with promptly.

Stores.—The adoption of the contract system, and the general convenience of the schools, may require the formation of a central store, from which supplies of certain materials may be obtained. But such stores should be limited to articles which are in constant use, and of which it is difficult to forecast accurately the amount which will be required. Within this description would be found exercise books, drawing-books, pens, pencils, chalk, school stationery, etc. But apparatus, such as school reading-books, maps, diagrams, models, and similar material, should be supplied direct to the schools by the contracting firm. Schools seldom have accommodation for the storage of large quantities of such articles, and on hygienic grounds it is undesirable that air space should be occupied by unnecessary cupboards. Nor is it desirable that there should be stored in the school expensive materials, which ultimately may not be required, and equally is it undesirable that any rule should be laid down so limiting the supply of goods of this character as to leave the teacher at some period of the year unable to cope with the necessities of the school, arising perhaps from increased attendance. Nor must it be forgotten that the advent of an infectious disease may call for the destruction of school materials. Such difficulties are avoided when requisite material may be obtained direct from the publisher.

List of Books, &c.—A list of materials permanently kept at any central store should be supplied to every head teacher. This list should be conveniently catalogued and numbered, in order to simplify both the work of requisition and supply. But managers and teachers should not have their hands unnecessarily tied by any such list. They should be free to requisition articles which do not appear thereon.

Requisitions.—The plan of requiring requisitions to cover a period exceeding three months is objectionable. Few schools are supplied with proper storage accommodation, and many articles of school use deteriorate on long exposure. There is the danger of over-supply and consequent waste, and the even greater danger of insufficient supply. Head teachers should, therefore, be allowed to send in a requisition list at least once in three months, and if storage space be limited once a month. This list should be countersigned by the managers, and upon teachers and managers should rest the responsibility. The practice of revising these lists at the central office by a clerk who has never seen the schools, and knows nothing of their conditions, or by some organising inspector whose acquaintance with the schools is only a trifle less imperfect, has only to be mentioned to be condemned. There can be no justification for the practice. Managers and teachers will not desire to hamper the schools with unnecessary material, and should by chance an instance of extravagance occur, it can be dealt with on its merits, without resorting to a practice which cripples the schools, and is, in fact, an insult to both managers and teachers.

Cost per Scholar.—It appears difficult, if not impossible, to frame any satisfactory scheme by which school materials may be supplied in accordance with a pre-determined amount per scholar in attendance. Schools not only differ in size, but in curriculum. Average attendance is a most uncertain guide to the amount of material required. It not only penalises the small school, but imposes serious difficulties on schools where the actual attendane departs widely at irregular intervals from the average, as in infants' departments, and the upper standards in schools for older scholars. The better plan is to treat every school on its own merits. But if a fixed sum per head be decided on, head teachers should be permitted to spread the cost of certain apparatus, such as reading-books, maps, and other comparatively expensive materials, over more than one year, in order to average the cost year by year. In all these regulations it may well be kept in mind that if a competent teacher has been selected—one who can be trusted to manage his school—he can also be trusted to select the tools he requires in order to carry out his work.

Stocktaking.—Teachers should be held responsible for checking goods on delivery, both in respect of quality and quantity. Yearly stocktaking should be ample. The method of keeping stock and store books, and the system of stocktaking, will necessarily vary in different districts. Plans applicable to compact county boroughs may be unsatisfactory in a large administrative county. But care should be taken that men and women who have been specially trained to discharge the difficult and important duties which are the special function of the teacher, should not have their time wasted and their energies occupied as booking clerks.

Wear and Tear.—A certain amount of wear and tear is inevitable, and the extent to which it may be necessary to recognise this fact will depend very largely on purely local circumstances. Schools in very poor districts often contain a number of children whose clothing is in such a condition that they will render unfit for use books, stationery, etc., which under more favourable circumstances would serve for a longer period, and any general rule is bound therefore to lead to serious difficulties.

Instances of extravagance can be suitably dealt with by managers and the Local Authority, whenever they arise, without the formation of any general regulations. Such regulations have proved difficult to carry out, full of injustice, and generally ineffective. The cost of supervising, checking, and rejecting is often greater than the total possible margin of waste.

Soiled Material.—It would probably be desirable that material no longer suitable for school purposes should be disposed of without delay. Occasionally, books no longer fitted for school work may be given to the pupils, as for example, when a change in reading books is effected; but every teacher should be empowered to destroy without hesitation all school material which from any cause is likely to spread infectious disease. This applies particularly to needlework specimens. Wherever a school has been closed on account of epidemic sickness, it may be taken as a general rule that all needlework specimens should be immediately burnt, lest their subsequent use or sale should lead to further disaster.

Interchange of Reading Books.—Some Local Authorities have tried the plan of passing reading-books from one school to another, with the very praiseworthy object of increasing the range of the scholars' reading. The plan has proved to be open to serious objection. The number of times a school reading-book is handled by different scholars before the class can be held to have completed their study of that particular work is so great that, notwithstanding the exercise of all possible care, a certain amount of dilapidation must ensue. To take these finger-marked, broken-backed books and place them in the hands of other scholars as a new reading book destroys the child's idea of freshness, neatness, and order. An adult finds pleasure in the handling of a new, well-bound book. The influence on the child is probably much greater. He opens a book for the first time with great curiosity. It is a strong incentive to persevere with the reading. This encouragement is largely lost when second-hand books are placed before the average scholar.

REGULATIONS IN OPERATION.—The following notes are a précis of the regulations adopted by the authorities indicated:—

Burnley.—Managers meet monthly, first week in the month. Requisition sent to them by 1st of month. Passed by managers, and order at once placed. If the requisitions are extraordinary in their character, the chairman and clerk are generally asked to make inquiries. The store room is used for stationery only. Other materials are supplied by two contracting firms. There are no set regulations for teachers, and no list of materials limiting the discretionary choice of the teacher.

Bournemouth—Requisition forms are filled up by head teacher, and signed at a meeting of managers. Requisitions are sent in monthly, and goods supplied from central office.

Cheltenham.—List of articles required must be submitted by head teacher to the managers, signed by the correspondent, and forwarded to the Education Secretary. School requisites are supplied or ordered by the Education Committee.

Darwen.—Each head teacher forwards requisition sheet monthly to the secretary of the Education Committee, and all goods are supplied by contract. Goods are checked at the Education Office before being sent to the schools.

Dorset.—A book of requisition forms is supplied to each head teacher. List of goods required is submitted to the managers, signed by the correspondent or chairman, and forwarded to the County Education Office, where it is examined, and, if approved, countersigned and forwarded to the contractor mentioned on the form. The tenders of four firms have been accepted, and goods are obtained from whichever firm is approved.

Glossop.—Detailed list of all goods required by any school during each month is sent to the Education Office by the managers before the last Monday in each month. Each requisition receives the careful attention of the Primary Education Sub-Committee, and, if approved, secretary obtains and forwards the required goods to the managers before the first Monday in the following month.

Gloucestershire.—Furniture, apparatus, books, stationery, and all other educational requirements are ordered by the secretary on receipt of requisition form signed by the correspondent. These forms are received every three months. Supplementary requisitions, if urgent, may be forwarded to the secretary by the official correspondent without having been formally submitted to the managers. Needlework materials may be obtained from a local tradesman. Articles regularly required for the heating, lighting, and cleaning of the schools may be ordered by the managers.

Torquay.—Requisition forms are filled in by teachers, countersigned by correspondent, and forwarded to the Education Secretary for order every three months.

SECTION VII.

SCHOOL STAFFING.

The Staff should be "sufficient" and "efficient."

Education committees have no question more important to consider than the sufficiency and efficiency of the teaching staff.

It must be Sufficient. Article 12 of the Elementary School Code runs as follows:—

"12. (a) In no case will a staff be considered sufficient if it is not at least equivalent for the average attendance measured by the following scale:—

Teacher.	Number of Children in Average Attendance.
The Head Teacher	50
Each Assistant Teacher (Certificated or Uncertificated under Schedule I., C 6)*	60
Each Assistant Teacher (Uncertificated or Provisionally Certificated)*...	45
Each Supplementary Teacher*	30
Each Provisional Assistant Teacher*	30
Each Pupil Teacher*	30
Each Probationer†	20

The above scale must not be understood to indicate that a school thus staffed will necessarily be regarded as complying with the requirements of Article 10. In every case the sufficiency and suitability of the staff will be viewed in the light of the various considerations specified in that article.

This Article does not apply to Greenwich Hospital or to Marine Schools.

"(b) For the purpose of Article 32 (b), the following scale is substituted for that given in (a) above.

Teacher.	Number of Children in Average Attendance.
The Head Teacher	40
Each Assistant Teacher (Certificated or Uncertificated under Schedule I., C. 6)	40
Each Assistant Teacher (Uncertificated or Provisionally Certificated)	30
Each Supplementary Teacher	20
Each Provisional Assistant Teacher	20
Each Pupil Teacher	20
Each Probationer	10."

The above regulation is, however, the minimum which under ordinary circumstances will be recognised by the Board of Education as sufficient to enable the Board to pay to the local authority the Parliamentary Grant due on account of a public elementary school.

On this subject the Secretary of the Board of Education, in the prefatory memorandum to the Code, 1903, writes:—

"The rule under which each teacher counted on the staff as sufficient for a certain number of children in average attendance has been altered. Henceforth the scale set forth in Article 73 (now Article 12) will indicate a minimum

Article* 32.—"Where the population of the parish in which any Public Elementary School is situate, or the population within two miles, measured according to the nearest road from the school, is less than 500, and there is no other Public Elementary School recognised by the Board as available for that parish, or that population, as the case may be, the Board may make n addition to all other grants:—(a) a special grant at the rate of £10 a year if the said population is less than 300 and exceeds 200, or at the rate of £15 a year if the said population does not exceed 200; and (b) a special grant at the rate of £10 a year, provided that the latter grant is not payable in respect of any period during which the staff has not satisfied the conditions of Article 12 (b), subject to the conditions of Articles 9 (ii.) and 11 (b) as to vacancies."

school staff in the sense that, subject to unforeseen or unavoidable contingencies as provided for in Article 92 (now Article 30 (6)) no public elementary school in which the regular staff is below that scale can be considered eligible for grants at all." . . . "The Board desire it to be clearly understood that in future a staff confined to the scale set out in Article 73 is not to be regarded as universally, or even generally, sufficient to justify the payment of the State subsidy. The various circumstances and requirements of each particular school will in every case be carefully considered, and the sufficiency and suitability of the staff thus measured and estimated will be deemed to be a condition precedent to the payment of any annual grant at all for that school."

Article 10 of the Elementary School Code, 1906, is as follows :—

10. The school or department must have a sufficient and suitable staff.‡

The "staff" of a school or department consists, for the purposes of this Code, of all the teachers whose employment in the school or department is recognised by the Board (see Articles 11 and 15).

"In considering the sufficiency and suitability of the staff of a school or department, the Board will have regard to the circumstances and requirements of the locality and the organisation and co-ordination of the various schools in the area, the arrangement of the premises of the school for teaching purposes, the number of children in attendance, their organisation and proficiency, the nature of approved course of instruction, the qualification of each member of the staff and his suitability for the work assigned to him, and the regular absence of any teacher during the school hours for the purpose of receiving professional training or otherwise."

In the "Suggestions for the consideration of Teachers and others," published by the Board of Education in 1905, the following paragraphs are found :—

"The first condition in determining the sufficiency of a staff must be the numbers in average attendance; but the special circumstances of every school or department, and the efficiency of the individual members of the staff, must in every case be taken into account.

"The number of scholars is only one factor in the case; their age and sex, their intellectual capacity, their health and condition in life, and the planning and equipment of the buildings have each an important bearing on the number or quality of the staff required. Infants and the lower classes of other scholars should be taught by women, and the presence of experienced women teachers in mixed schools other than infant schools is indispensable. Moreover, there are some teachers who are quite capable of teaching infants and the lower classes of younger scholars, but are not capable of undertaking the instruction of the higher classes. In general, a "Supplementary Teacher" as defined in the Code will not be recognised by the Board as a suitable teacher of any of the upper classes of a School."

In determining, therefore, the staff required in a particular school, Education Authorities will find it necessary to consider, not merely the average attendance, but the circumstances of the particular school.

Large Schools.—No school should be so large as to make it impossible for the head teacher to exercise complete supervision. Wherever the school has an attendance sufficient to justify the appointment of a teacher to each class, the head teacher should not only be in excess of the numerical minimum required by Article 12, but should not be required to attach himself permanently to any particular class. He should be left free to organise, prepare schemes of work, and to advise parents respecting the future career of their children. It is essential that he should be able to acquire personal knowledge of every child in the school.

A Local Authority having desired to depart from the plans under which the loan for buildings was sanctioned, and to open such School with one large department, objection was raised by the Board of Education, and such objection was sustained in the following terms, which are extracted from a letter of the Board, dated July 7th, 1906 :—

"It appears to the Board that if there is to be a sound educational organisation there must be in every school, or separate department of a school, a real Head Teacher whose duties are confined to that school or department, and who himself takes an active part in the work and gives a certain amount of definite teaching. And in order that such a man should be in any real sense the Head Teacher, he must be himself directly responsible to the Managers or the Local Education Authority for the efficient working of the school, and must be able to exercise effective personal supervision and control of all the staff. To ensure this, it is obviously necessary that the total number of teachers under such a Head Teacher should be no more than he can thus properly supervise—the number of children, in turn, being of course such as can properly and efficiently be taught by that staff including all the Assistant Teachers and himself.

"After giving the most careful consideration to this question, the Board have decided that as at present advised they cannot properly sanction any new school in which the average attendance exceeds 550 being placed under one such Head Teacher with his staff, on the grounds above set out, and that even this number is larger than is generally speaking desirable, and must not be taken as one which will regularly be sanctioned.

"I am particularly to point out that the arrangement proposed at the interview, that there should be one Chief Teacher over the two departments of 740 children, under whom there should be two subordinate Head Teachers, one for the Senior Mixed and the other for the Junior Mixed, does not appear from an educational point of view satisfactory.

"Such a Chief Teacher could not be in any true or effective sense a Head Teacher. The interposition of such an official between the actual working Heads of those departments and the Managers would be fatal to the authority of those subordinate Head Teachers, would greatly lessen their sense of responsibility, and would tend to neutralise that personal influence which a good Head Teacher should have over his staff and his scholars.

"The personal influence of the teacher is one of the most important elements in the educational life of a school. This personal influence can only be secured where the Head Teacher is himself directly responsible to the Managers or the Local Education Authority, and knows that the credit for success and the responsibility for failure will mainly rest upon his own individual efforts. The regulations which he establishes between himself and his staff, and in particular the acquaintance that, in his association with the scholars in the various classes, he is able to make with the characters and capabilities of individual scholars, are of great educational value, and promote that corporate life and esprit de corps which is so important a feature in the growth and development of a good school. Whereas, if the staff and children know that the Head Teacher is himself subordinate to another official, they will not look up to or respect him in the same way, and the teacher himself will lack the stimulus which the sense of real and ultimate responsibility can alone give him.

"The Board of Education for these reasons must decide that they cannot recognise the proposals now put forward by your Authority for organising the School as one department of 740 children under one Head Teacher, with two subordinate heads, over the Senior and Junior Sections respectively. But, as the building has already been erected, they are willing that, so long as the total number of children in both sections together does not exceed 550 children, they may be placed under one Head Teacher. The school will then be considered a one-department school, not two departments, and no subordinate Head Teacher under the real Head Teacher can be recognised. It must however be distinctly understood that when the attendance exceeds 550, the organisation of the school must be altered, and the school must be conducted in two separate departments, each under its own separate Head Teacher."

Small Schools.—The staff of a small school is necessarily expensive. There is no reason why the pupils in such schools should receive teaching less efficient than is given in larger schools. They have rights equal to those of scholars in larger schools. Even in the smallest schools children vary considerably in age and attainments, and it is a grave mistake, both economically as well as educationally, to attempt to conduct a small school with an insufficient staff.

In no school should there be less than two adult teachers. It is possible that the classes may be much smaller than in a large school, but inasmuch as they will of necessity be composed of children in at least two or three stages of the school course, the task of the teacher is even more difficult than with a single class numerically large, and the opportunities for giving individual instruction are fewer.

Size of Classes.—No class should exceed forty in average attendance. Under the more educational methods of training children, now happily adopted in public elementary schools, it is of vital importance that the class master should be able to analyse the mental capacity of every pupil, and to give individual attention to the development of physical and intellectual strength. With large classes, this difficult but exceptionally important duty cannot be adequately performed. Classes of unwieldy size encourage objectionable disciplinary methods. It seldom happens that more than forty children can be found in any school, no matter how large, so near the general average of attainments as to enable them all to progress at the same rate. In large classes an appreciable proportion must always mark time, and another portion be unduly urged forward.

The secret of much of the success of many Continental schools lies in the manageable size of the classes. Thus the classes in the elementary schools in France and Switzerland do not average more than fifty; in Holland and Sweden, forty; Denmark, between thirty and forty; Italy, between twenty-five and fifty-five; Saxony, forty: America, between thirty and forty; and in the Colonies, between thirty and forty. Granted that these averages, covering as they do wide areas, may not be strictly applicable to particular districts, yet they show that on the whole classes in good foreign schools are very much smaller than those usually found in England and Wales.

Distribution of Staff.—The Board write in the "Suggestions for the Consideration of teachers and others":—

"In large modern schools a separate room is provided for each class in charge of its own teacher, and this is the most effective arrangement. But such an arrangement is impossible in small schools, and in many large schools of older types. Whatever be the circumstances, each separate group of scholars ought to be in the definite charge of some one teacher, though in small schools it may be necessary for the same teacher to be responsible for more than one group. If there is more than one class, the Head Teacher, though he ought to take some definite part of the work of one or more of the classes, should never be so fully occupied in teaching that he cannot have the school as a whole under observation. There must be very great difficulties where a teacher has scholars of varying degrees of proficiency, and it is hoped that Local Education Authorities will be able to provide effective assistance in a school attended by children of all ages, even though the total number of scholars is small."

The Head Teacher.—The head teacher of each department should be held responsible for the general control and supervision of the instruction, discipline, and organisation. It is his duty to draw up a general scheme of instruction for the department, to see that its details are properly worked out by the teacher of each class, and to supervise the keeping by the staff of notebooks for containing brief summaries of the chief oral lessons. He must watch over the effectiveness of the instruction given; and, in matters connected with teaching or discipline, he ought to give to the younger members of the staff such assistance as their inexperience may require.

Peripatetic Teachers.—The staff of a large school should be sufficient for the curriculum adopted, and if educational efficiency be alone considered, a similar principle should apply to every school. But while in small schools the demand for a staff sufficient to meet ordinary requirements can be amply justified, yet the addition of special subjects, such as Physical Drill, Manual Training, Cottage Gardening, Technical Lessons on Local Industries and Occupations, may with advantage be met by the appointment of special teachers attached to a group of schools. Wherever such appointments are made, the following conditions should be observed: There should be no disturbance of the authority of the head teacher. He must remain in charge of the general organisation and discipline of the school. The special teacher should accept responsibility for the teaching of the subject to the same extent, and under like conditions as a class teacher. He would be in fact a class teacher appointed for the time being for a special purpose. If this plan be adopted, teachers who have had special training in special subjects would be able to teach them in a number of small schools, thereby relieving the pressure upon the ordinary staff, and consequently secure greater efficiency.

Supply Teachers.—It is almost essential that every Education Authority should engage a staff of unattached teachers to—

(a) Fill vacancies caused by illness or unexpected resignation.

(b) To fill the places of teachers granted leave of absence in order to visit other schools.

These unattached teachers would probably recruit the permanent staff.

The Staff must be Efficient.—The head of every department, with trifling exceptions, must, in accordance with the Code, be a certificated teacher, and in a well-organised school there should be no place for any but teachers holding the full diploma of the Board of Education or some certificate of equal merit.

Uncertificated Teachers.—Assistant teachers who have not obtained a certificate should be required, within a short number of years, to secure such a certificate or give up school teaching. Exceptional cases might be treated exceptionally.

Supplementary Teachers.—These were recognised by the Board of Education under a system which is now passing away. The poverty which brought about their existence has been removed by the Act of 1902. Wherever these teachers give evidence of teaching capacity, they should be required to obtain a certificate within a fixed period, or, failing such certificate, should be required to resign. Those who do not give evidence of teaching capacity should be removed from the schools as quickly as possible.

Pupil Teachers.—These young persons are apprentices, and should be treated as such. They have a potential and not a present value. In no case should they be counted as on the school staff, and their engagement should only be permitted in schools specially equipped for their training.

A large number of Local Authorities now exclude pupil teachers when determining the strength of the staff.

The Training of Teachers.—This subject will be more fully discussed in Section XII. But there is one phase of the question which may well find inclusion in this chapter. A young teacher having completed his or her apprenticeship by passing the preliminary certificate examination, or some other equivalent test, should be encouraged to seek admission to a training college, and thus proceed to gain full equipment as a trained certificated teacher.

The practice of retaining these young people as uncertificated teachers in the schools in which they have been apprenticed is open to very serious objection. Successful teaching is the outcome of a knowledge of life and of public affairs, as well as of academic learning and school training; and this wider knowledge will not be obtained if the young teacher be retained continuously within one narrow environment.

This warning is as necessary in the interests of teachers themselves as it is in respect of the schools.

If young teachers who desire to remain at home instead of going to college, or to go back home on leaving college, were only conscious of the injury they are inflicting on themselves they would quickly adopt another course of action.

The vitalising influence of a good teacher is largely the result of his own knowledge of life. The narrower his own mental horizon, the less his influence and the smaller his personal satisfaction.

Teachers should also recognise that on the termination of apprenticeship the contract into which their guardians entered with the school managers or the Local Education Authority is terminated, and they have no right to expect or anticipate retention in the school. Uncertificated teachers who obtain their certificates should also recollect that their contract is to give service in the capacity of an uncertificated teacher at the stipend received by such teachers, and if they obtain the certificate and thus enter a higher grade in the profession they have no inherent right to appointment as a certificated teacher or to the emoluments of such grade. Their old contract remains good, and alteration of conditions must necessarily depend upon the execution of a new contract of service.

The attitude adopted by certain local authorities in connection with this phase of the teacher's life calls for some comment. The services of A.B. are required for a certain class containing say thirty or forty pupils. A.B. obtains her certificate, and instances have arisen where local authorities have then said "A.B. is no longer necessary for this particular class. She must go, and another teacher be secured, who will be sufficient and not more than sufficient for the class in question." This action arises from the uneducational view which such authorities have taken of Article 12 of the Code. It cannot be too emphatically stated that the question of sufficiency does not depend upon numbers alone. A.B. is as necessary for the education of the children in this school after she has obtained her certificate as she was before.

The knowledge that the engagement may be terminated on the ground that the teacher having gained a certificate is no longer "necessary" to the staff of the school will often induce young teachers who wish to remain at home to refrain from seeking those higher qualifications which in the interests of national education it is most desirable they should secure at the earliest possible date.

Indeed, Local Education Authorities may well recollect that they enjoy responsibilities which extend beyond the schools of their own area. Collectively they are the most important factor in the organisation of Popular Education, and hence the desirableness of increasing the number of well-trained teachers should be with them an ever present consideration.

SECTION VIII.

DISCIPLINE IN SCHOOLS.

Order, diligence, and obedience must be secured and maintained in every school, or educational progress becomes impossible. This, indeed, is so obvious that the assertion needs no support. But good discipline does not imply the maintenance of a statuesque position for an indefinite period of time. Indeed, such a position may cultivate both physical and mental deformity. Good discipline, on the contrary, is not incompatible with the exercise of very considerable freedom on the part of the scholars. On this phase of the question regulations by a Local Authority are impracticable. Everything must depend upon the moral strength and skill of the teacher and the readiness with which the pupils respond to his direction.

Regulations.—Certain Local Authorities, however, have endeavoured by published regulations to restrict the methods by which teachers may attempt to obtain the observance of those rules which in their totality constitute school discipline. Not infrequently these regulations are of such a comprehensive character that one of two results must necessarily ensue—either the regulation must be broken, in spirit if not in letter, or the maintenance of discipline becomes an impossibility. The absurdity of such regulations would become apparent if the Local Authority, having prescribed what the teacher shall not do, would go on to state what he may do, in order to secure good habits amongst his scholars. Such an attempt would show that the power left within the hands of the teacher is insufficient to attain the object which the Local Education Authority recognise as essential, but which they are unconsciously rendering impossible of accomplishment, by faulty regulation. Indeed, there is no phase of school life which needs more anxious thought than the establishment of regulations connected with the maintenance of school discipline. On other subjects a faulty regulation may produce embarrassment without inflicting positive injury. But defective regulations on school discipline lead to positive mischief, which may be exceedingly difficult to eradicate.

Expulsion of Scholars.—It is often alleged that many excellent schools maintain good discipline without the exercise of corporal punishment, and this is used as an argument in favour of the total prohibition of corporal punishment. But when the assertion is submitted to close examination it is generally found to be valueless. For the purposes of that argument the term corporal punishment receives an interpretation so narrow that the inaccuracy of the assertion becomes instantly apparent. Punishment with a cane or like instrument may be excluded, but if other forms whereby bodily pain is caused be adopted it can hardly be said that corporal punishment is excluded, and these other forms are often far more objectionable than punishment with a cane if administered judiciously and judicially.

If a school be carried on under ideal conditions, punishment of all kind may be reduced to such a narrow minimum as to justify the assertion that for all practical purposes punishment is unnecessary. Thus, if there be a thoroughly competent teacher for every class, and every class be of small dimensions, taught in rooms designed to preserve the health of the scholars, and if these scholars come from homes where habits of discipline are the rule and not the exception, then the teacher's task is comparatively an easy one, and he may hope to avoid being called upon to discharge the teacher's most objectionable duty. But even in such schools the power to inflict corporal punishment is generally reserved, while the power of expulsion is almost invariably placed in the hands of the governors or of the head master, and is so specifically expressed in the trust deed or other instrument relating to the control of the school. This, too, is the great power wielded by teachers and Education Authorities in other countries where the law prohibits the infliction of corporal punishment.

Discipline in Secondary Schools.—Not infrequently the conditions above described prevail in English Secondary Schools. The classes are small and the children come from good homes. Yet it is the rule for the head teacher to have full power to punish his pupil if the interests of the school call for the exercise of such a disciplinary measure. In these schools the head teacher usually also possesses and exercises the right to expel an unruly child.

This power is of enormous value to the teacher. The parents of children attending such schools are not only anxious that the child shall remain at school, but very frequently strongly desire the child shall remain at a particular school. The expulsion of the child is regarded as a dishonour to the family, an act which will arouse the indignation of the parents and thus act as a strong corrective toward the child. This right of expulsion is not merely a penalty held in terrorem over the child: it is an act which removes from the school a source of evil. Punishment may be inflicted not only in the interests of the delinquent himself, but as a protection to other scholars, and corporal punishment is obviously less necessary where this power of expulsion exists. Probably if the child could be consulted he would infinitely prefer to meet the judicial action of the schoolmaster rather than the indignation of his own father.

In Public Elementary Schools.—That a teacher enjoys the same right as a parent with regard to the punishment of a scholar during the hours in which such scholar is under his direct control will not be contested. Judicial decisions have made the law quite clear on this point. The teacher has the right to punish. Whether the offence is one which calls for punishment rests almost entirely within his discretion, and so long as the punishment be not excessive, be administered in a proper spirit, with due regard to the safety of the child, the law will protect the teacher in the exercise of his duty.

In Elementary Schools no general right of expulsion exists. The parent is under obligation to send the child to school until the age defined by the local bye-law. It is a serious thing to prevent the parent discharging that obligation, and such a step should not be taken excepting under very rare circumstances when all other measures have failed.

The conditions which prevail in Elementary Schools are not calculated to minimise punishment. Classes are far too large. The attainments of the scholars in these large classes differ. The attempt to drive the slow child at too great a rate may lead to his open revolt, while the fact that the brightest children are not sufficiently occupied is an inducement to mischief with obvious consequences. With smaller classes the amount of punishment will be reduced. Frequently, also, children are taught in overcrowded rooms, badly lighted and wretchedly ventilated. Such influences acting on scholars and teacher encourage disorder and make the preservation of discipline a matter of considerable difficulty.

It must not be forgotten that the Elementary School must admit every child who comes, though in some cases the home influences may go far to encourage a rebellious spirit. Some of the children are brought up under circumstances which leave but little room for the strict observance of the decalogue, and indeed sometimes under conditions which treat fraud and theft as smart things to be encouraged rather than discredited. We would not say that the home training, of which there is none, is against the child, but the street training is against him. The child may, in fact, be admitted to the school under magisterial order. These cases are extreme, comparatively few in number, but it is upon these children that punishment may be expected to fall if the interests of the majority of the children in a Public Elementary School are to be preserved.

In framing regulations on this subject for such schools the Local Education Authority may well keep vividly before their minds the interests of the children who are not likely to be punished as well as the interests of those who render punishment necessary.

Illicit Punishment. — The prohibition of punishment likely to produce bodily injury ought not to be necessary. In law there is no protection for the teacher who is guilty of such methods. Throughout the teaching profession they are recognised as unjustifiable. But if a Local Authority feel that by the publication of a regulation they can ensure the exclusion of such punishment from their schools, no one would object. It is, however, notorious that these illicit punishments are resorted to where by regulation a L.E.A. prohibits the infliction of justifiable punishment.

School Tasks.—The habit of giving a disobedient child an exercise to write or learn, generally the former, a task to be accomplished out of school hours, has been associated with disciplinary measures in schools, both Elementary and Secondary, from the earliest periods. It is a most questionable form of punishment, tending to make the child abhor the studies which have been used as a punishment. To write the same word many times is a meaningless, irritating exercise, to write long passages leads to bad handwriting and to detestation of the subject matter of the exercise. If children are to be taught to love to study, their work should be connected with pleasurable associations, and should not be the means for effecting punishment.

The Board of Education's Views.—In the "Suggestions for the Consideration of Teachers and Others," the Board publish the following note:—

> With many children the reproof of a teacher whom they esteem is in itself a punishment which makes positive penalties unnecessary; with others the most sympathetic teacher may find that punishment in some shape or other must be resorted to. When it is necessary to punish a scholar for faulty school work or for breaches of school rules, the principal object should be the benefit of the scholar, though the vindication of school discipline is often necessary in difficult cases. The penalty assigned must therefore be just, that is, it must be a reasonable and natural consequence of the fault in the case of the particular child. For example, faults due to carelessness or wilfulness may merit a punishment which is not deserved if the same faults arise from that slowness of mental development which may often appear in children from poor homes. If the bodies of such children are not actually ill-nourished, their intellectual development is often retarded by uncongenial surroundings. The punishment of such children for faults of school work is a matter which calls for the exercise of judgment.

The Teacher's Responsibility.—A teacher, so long as he holds authority over a child, has the power, and is, indeed, charged with the responsibility of inflicting corporal punishment whenever, in the judgment of the teacher, such punishment is necessary. In the exercise of this power, the teacher must conform to the regulations made by the Local Authority. Otherwise, though in the punishment of a child he may receive the protection which the law affords should legal proceedings be taken against him, yet the tenure of his office may become involved through failure to carry out the regulations of his employers.

Though it is the duty of a Local Authority to protect the children against illicit forms of punishment, as well as against the abuse of legitimate forms of punishment, yet the obligation also rests upon the authority of seeing that the general discipline of the school is maintained, and that the majority of the pupils are effectively protected against the consequences of evil habit exercised by any pupil. On the Local Authority rests the responsibility of maintaining for the competent teacher that freedom of action which the law allows, which parents recognise, and which the scholars are quite prepared to admit. In the exercise of this power Local Education Authorities may well consider the following suggestions:—

> (1) A consciousness on the part of the children that assistant teachers are prohibited from inflicting corporal punishment often incites them so to act as to need such punishment.
> (2) The removal of restriction is the most effectual means for suppressing illicit, irregular, and improper forms of punishment.

(3) Experience shows that the complaints of parents usually result from irregular punishment, and do not arise when punishment is inflicted in a legitimate manner under well-known regulations. Permission to so inflict punishment would therefore tend to improve the relations existing between parents and teachers.

(4) It is undesirable that children should regard the head teacher in a most unfavourable light as being the sole administrator of corporal punishment.

(5) Regulations by which the infliction of punishment is restricted to the head teacher often render hard-working assistants liable to dismissal at any moment, for they are driven either to break the regulations, or to see their work ruined through the disorderly conduct of two or three of their pupils, who not infrequently destroy the discipline of an entire class.

The Board of Education state:—"It would appear to be advisable that Local Education Authorities and managers should, as a rule, place the responsibility for the discipline of a school in this, as in other respects, upon the head teacher, and leave him some considerable discretion in the matter. In regard to his or her school or department the head teacher will be the most suitable person to decide whether or not the right to administer corporal punishment should be extended to certain members of the staff. The head teacher will also be in a position to judge whether the circumstances make it advisable to keep a record of all occasions when corporal punishment is resorted to."—Suggestions for the Consideration of Teachers and others, etc.

This is the practice usually adopted by Local Authorities. They have by regulation recognised the duty which rests upon the head teacher, though for such recognition no regulation was necessary, and they have explicitly conferred upon the head teacher the duty of determining the conditions under which assistant teachers may be entrusted with the duty of maintaining discipline in their own classes.

The Assistant Teacher's Duty.—The mistaken notion that an assistant teacher is a young person commencing duty in school, a person of immature judgment, of imperfect discretion, is gradually passing away. It never had any existence, and yet it was the only possible excuse for some of the absurd regulations affecting assistant teachers promulgated some years ago by Education Authorities. It must be recollected that a teacher does not secure his certificate until after the expiration of some years of training, and of no little practice and exercise of personal responsibility within the school. The certificated teachers may have seen several years of successful service, may be themselves parents, hold high public office outside their schools, even be entrusted with the administration of justice from the Magisterial Bench. How absurd becomes the regulation which tells such men that they cannot be trusted to cane a child, but may be trusted to sentence an adult to imprisonment! The class in a large school tends to become a little school in itself under the care of one teacher, for rarely are the whole of the scholars brought together. Between the scholars of the class and their teacher grow up relationships which it is unwise to interrupt by the unnecessary intervention of a third person. Experience abundantly proves that the knowledge of the teacher's power prevents any call for the exercise of that power, and equally the knowledge that the Local Authority have rendered that teacher incapable increases his difficulties and causes the frequent use of corporal punishment. To correct unruly children the head teacher should not be called away from other important duties, nor is it possible for him to estimate accurately upon a verbal report presented by the teacher the fault of which the child has been guilty, and the punishment which should therefore be inflicted. The final act of insubordination which demands the infliction of punishment may, in itself, be comparatively small, yet may be part of some general long-continued misconduct, of which the class teacher alone can have full cognisance. Local Authorities would be well advised in permitting those of their teachers who possess the diploma of the Education Department to administer that degree of punishment which experience has shown to be absolutely necessary.

The views expressed in the above note are supported by the action of the more important Education Authorities throughout England and Wales. In London, Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, Nottingham, and other town and in County areas, the Local Authorities have by regulation explicitly placed responsibility in the hands of head and assistant certificated teachers, while in places like Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Devonshire, Northumberland, Nottinghamshire, Bath, Salisbury, Chester, etc., etc., the Local Authority have not thought it wise to unduly restrict the power to maintain discipline by the issue of any regulations on the subject.

This Memorandum is no apology for the unrestricted use of punishment in schools. We desire to assist in the rigid exclusion of all forms of punishment which lead to evil. But in dealing with a subject of this importance we are bound to recall our own experience, confirmed as it is by reports from all parts of the country which for many years have passed through our hands.

SECTION IX.

THE APPOINTMENT AND DISMISSAL OF TEACHERS

APPOINTMENT.

Council Schools.—Both the appointment and the dismissal of teachers in Council Schools are technically vested in the Council itself. But it is one of the duties which, under section 17 of the Education Act of 1902, shall stand referred to the Education Committee, though in exceptional circumstances, if, in the opinion of the Council, the matter is urgent, the Council may act without the intervention of the Committee.

The appointment of teachers in Council Schools may be by written agreement, or by resolution of the Committee, recorded in the minutes of proceedings.

Under the Act of 1902, local education authorities in boroughs and urban districts are not required to appoint managers for Council Schools. Where they refrain from appointing managers, the teachers of the schools will naturally be selected and appointed by the Local Education Committee, subject, if necessary, to confirmation by the Council.

As a rule the local managers notify to the Education Committee the necessity for appointment. In some cases the Education Committee recommend to the managers some person already in the employment of the local authority, but it is usually provided that the vacancy shall be advertised.

In some instances the applications are considered by a sub-committee of the Education Committee. The names of three persons are selected, one of whom is appointed by the committee.

In other instances the task of selection is left to the local managers, who submit three names to the Education Committee, from which the Education Committee appoint one.

Notice should at once be given to the Board of Education of any change in the school staff occurring during the school year, the date of birth of the new teacher, the name of the school in which he or she was last employed, and of that, if any, in which he or she served as pupil teacher should be specified. (Code, Art. 16.) Forms for supplying these particulars may be obtained from the Board of Education.

In view of the provisions of the Elementary School Teachers' Superannuation Act, 1898, attention to this rule is especially necessary in the case of certificated teachers (Art. 16, Elementary School Code).

A copy of Form 75 for elementary schools will be found on page 378 of the 1906 Edition of the N.U.T. Code, and Form 75 (H.E.) is reproduced on page 407 of the 1906 Edition of the same Code.

Voluntary Schools.—The consent of the local authority is required to the appointment of teachers, but the consent may not be withheld except on educational grounds. (Education Act, 1902, § 7 c.)

It is usual, when the managers of a Voluntary School propose to appoint a teacher, to inform the local authority that they desire to make such appointment, and inasmuch as section 7 (1) (a) of the Education Act, 1902, provides that the local authority may give directions with respect to the number and educational qualifications of the teachers to be employed for secular instruction, the managers must give their reasons for desiring to make such appointment. It may be that the appointment is necessary in the place of a teacher resigned, or in addition to the present staff of the school. Managers are also required to inform the authority of the salary they propose to pay the teacher.

Managers usually take their own steps, by advertisement or otherwise, to secure candidates for the vacant office. Having made a suitable selection, they are required to submit the name, qualifications, and testimonials to the local authority. No appointment can be regarded as completed until the consent of the local authority has been signified. In some instances the local authority themselves advertise vacancies for Voluntary School teachers.

Notice of appointment must be sent to the Board of Education in manner prescribed for Council Schools above.

AGREEMENTS.

Conditions of Employment.—Article 15 of the Elementary School Code, 1906, provides as follows:—

"15. Teachers must be employed under written agreements, provided that in the case of a school provided by a local education authority a teacher may be employed under a minute of the authority.

(a) Any agreement or minute of appointment dated on or after August 1st, 1904, under which a teacher other than a pupil teacher is employed in a public elementary school, must include, either expressly or by reference to this Article of the Code, one or other of the alternative Clauses set out below:—

The Board will not recognise, as part of the staff of a school or department, any teacher, other than a pupil teacher, unless this condition is complied with.

Clause (1).

The teacher shall not be required to perform any duties except such as are connected with the work of a public elementary school, or to abstain, outside the school hours, from any occupations which do not interfere with the due performance of his duties as teacher of a public elementary school.

Clause (2).

The teacher shall not be required to perform any duties except such as are connected with the work of a public elementary school and with the instruction of pupil teachers and probationers, or to abstain, outside the school hours, from any occupations which do not interfere with the due performance of his duties as teacher of a public elementary school or with the instruction of pupil teachers and probationers.

(b) Clause (2) must be included only if the teacher is required to instruct pupil teachers or probationers who are not receiving instruction in a Centre recognised by the Board. In other cases Clause (1) must be included.

(c) Sub-section (a) of this Article does not apply to Marine Schools or to schools which are attached to institutions in which children are boarded and lodged.

(d) The agreements or minutes under which pupil teachers are employed must be in accordance with the Regulations for the Instruction and Training of Pupil Teachers."

Teachers about to be appointed should carefully scrutinise the form of agreement which they are required to sign. In the case of Voluntary Schools it should show that the contract is with all the managers and not with one person. It should include Art. 15 of the Elementary Code (quoted above), and it should be so drafted as to secure to the teacher the full benefits of the Act of 1902. Suitable forms may be obtained on application to the Secretary of the N.U.T. Should the agreement provide that part of the teacher's emoluments shall be possession of a house free of rent charge, care should be taken to see that satisfactory arrangements are made with the managers with regard to rates and repairs.

Appointments made by minute are not liable to stamp duty.

The terms of a memorandum of agreement are decided by arrangement between the parties concerned, excepting that in cases where the local education authority require that they should be added as parties to an agreement between the managers of a Voluntary School and the teacher in such school, it is obvious that the terms must be settled by arrangement between the three parties concerned.

Failing agreement, the managers or local authority may appeal to the Board of Education.

The requirement that all teachers must be employed under written agreements is retrospective. If written agreements do not exist they must be executed. His Majesty's Inspector may call for their production on visiting the school, and if it be found that members of the staff are serving without written agreements, the Board may refuse to recognise such teachers as part of the staff. This may result in the school being insufficiently staffed; the grant payable on account of the instruction in such school would thus be placed in jeopardy, and the teacher may lose the benefit of the Superannuation Act.

Should any doubt arise as to the interpretation of the terms of an engagement, it can be removed, failing agreement, by legal process. Existing agreements remain in operation unless and until they are terminated in the manner prescribed therein.

The engagements of teachers in schools attached to institutions in which children are boarded and lodged must be in writing if such schools are subject to inspection by the Board of Education, or are in receipt of parliamentary grants. The managers and teachers of such schools make their own terms.

Higher Elementary Schools.—As such schools are subject to the regulations of the Elementary School Code so far as such regulations are applicable, it follows that the regulations with regard to the appointments of teachers in elementary schools apply also to appointments in higher elementary schools.

Secondary Schools.—Where the local authority are the governing body such teachers are usually appointed by minute. As the Board of Education require that every secondary school shall have a Board of Governors, it is often the practice of local education authorities to appoint one of their Committees as the Body of Governors.

In secondary schools, upon the governing body of which the local education authority is largely represented, the appointment of both head and assistant teachers usually rests with such governing body. But there are instances where the governing body select, but the appointment cannot be made definite without the sanction of the local education authority.

With regard to schools whose governors are appointed under the terms of a Trust, the head teachers are appointed in accordance with the terms of the scheme under which the school exists.

With regard to assistant teachers in such schools, the practice varies considerably.

These appointments are sometimes made by the governing body, but as a rule they are made by the head teacher, subject generally, but not always, to the sanction of the local authority.

Assistant teachers in secondary schools ask for as full certainty with regard to their tenure of office as teachers in elementary schools and secondary school teachers employed by local education authorities now enjoy. There is widespread dissatisfaction with regard to the method under which the assistant master becomes, as it were, a personal servant of the head teacher, liable to be removed by him at pleasure, and liable also to find his tenure of office abruptly terminated on the removal of the head teacher. Teachers qualified for service in secondary schools are now showing a decided disinclination to accept service in schools where their tenure of office or emoluments are in constant uncertainty.

Very frequently these appointments are made by the interchange of letters, which should be stamped in accordance with Inland Revenue Regulations. It is, however, desirable that the terms of such letters should be translated into a memorandum of agreement, stamped in the usual form, and describing in full the conditions of service.

Local education authorities may often bring about reform by attaching conditions to any grant that they may make in aid of schools managed under the terms of a Trust.

DISMISSAL.

Council Schools.—The local managers may recommend the dismissal of a teacher. This, however, should be reserved for extreme cases. It is the practice under large authorities to transfer from one school to another teachers who, though of good character and high qualifications, may not work smoothly under particular conditions.

By caution, reprimand, or transfer to another school, local authorities having control of many schools can generally effect necessary changes without terminating the teacher's engagement.

It should never be forgotten that the dismissal of a teacher involves something more than the mere removal of the teacher from the post he occupies. Frequently other education authorities regard it as evidence of incapacity for employment elsewhere, and hence it is the practice to give the teacher an opportunity of resigning.

Inasmuch as the teacher is under contract with the local education authority, notice of dismissal may not be given by the managers, but must be given, if at all, by the Education Committee acting under the power delegated by the local authority.

The teacher may appeal from the Local Education Committee to the local authority against such dismissal.

It is the custom in the profession for head teachers to receive notice three months before it becomes effective, and for assistant teachers to receive a notice of one month's duration.

Teachers giving notice are usually required to observe the same periods.

It is the custom for the managers of the schools in which the teacher has been employed, and for the local education authority for the district, to furnish the teacher who is leaving with suitable testimonials on the application of the said teacher.

Voluntary Schools.—The local authority may require the dismissal of any teacher on educational grounds. (Sec. 7 (1) (a) Education Act, 1902.)

The consent of the authority is required to the dismissal of a teacher, unless the dismissal be on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in a school.

When the managers of a Voluntary School propose to take the extreme course of dismissing a teacher, they must first notify the teacher and Education Committee, giving in full their reasons for dismissing such teacher. It is the practice of local education authorities to investigate by means of a sub-committee every such case. If the managers allege that the dismissal is based upon grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in a school, they may be required to prove the allegation. The religious instruction referred to here is that given in the ordinary day school, and has no connection with Sunday-school or any other religious work outside the day school time-table. If the managers can prove to the satisfaction of the local authority that the proposed dismissal is based on these grounds, and on none other, then the formal consent of the local authority will not be required.

But if they cannot so prove, then no dismissal can be effected without the formal consent of the local authority signified through the Education Committee.

Before such consent is given, full opportunity should be given to the teacher to state his defence, and the Education Committee should seek such other evidence as they think fit with a view to arriving at a just decision.

The consent referred to must be formally given by resolution of the education authority, and must be signified to the managers in the ordinary official manner.

If the consent be obtained, then the managers may proceed to give notice to terminate the contract.

Should the local authority withhold consent, then the managers must retain the services of the teacher, and must in every respect continue to comply with their existing contract with him. (This phase of the subject is more fully discussed in Section XIV.)

Questions frequently arise as to the power of a local authority to call upon managers of Voluntary Schools to remove certain teachers and appoint others. In connection with these cases the powers which are conferred by Section 7 of the Education Act, 1902, should not be forgotten. The managers must carry out any directions of a local education authority with respect to the number and educational qualifications of the teachers to be employed for such instruction; and if the local authority, therefore, are of opinion that the educational qualifications of existing members of the teaching staff are not satisfactory, they may issue directions to the managers, which directions the managers are bound to obey, even though it may involve the dismissal of certain teachers and the appointment of others. These difficulties usually occur in connection with proposals to terminate the engagement of supplementary teachers and to employ certificated teachers in their place. It would not appear that the Voluntary School managers can resist an instruction having this object in view. In cases where the local authority desire to proceed in the other direction, and to reduce the strength of the staff, they have the power to reduce the sum which they contribute towards maintenance, though here, again, such reduction may not proceed to an extent which would jeopardise the efficiency of the school. Usually these conflicts between managers and local authorities as to the strength of the staff are best settled by a reference of the dispute to the Board of Education.

REGULATIONS ADOPTED BY LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

Bournemouth.—All appointments are subject to the approval of the Education Committee, to whom any intended vacancy should be at once notified. In Voluntary Schools applications for confirmation must be accompanied by application and testimonials of teacher proposed to be appointed. In Council Schools all appointments shall be made by the Education Committee.

Managers may not dismiss a teacher without the consent of the Education Committee. In the event of them requiring the dismissal or resignation of a teacher, at least one month's notice must be given to the Education Committee, accompanied by a statement of the reason or reasons for such dismissal, or demand for resignation, in order that a full investigation may be made.

Buckinghamshire.—Council Schools.—Vacancies are to be notified by correspondent to the secretary of the Education Committee, together with recommendations from the managers. If Elementary Education Sub-Committee consider vacancy may be filled by transferring teacher in the employ of the committee, name of such teacher to be notified to the managers, and, if approved, such teacher to be appointed. If not approved, the secretary shall advertise the post, and the local managers shall select three candidates, whose names shall be forwarded to the secretary. Sub-committee to see selected candidates and nominate one for appointment.

Managers are not at liberty to call upon a teacher to resign without first obtaining the sanction of the Education Committee, to whom reasons for desiring such resignation must be submitted.

Voluntary Schools.—Managers to appoint all teachers, but such appointment will not take effect until confirmed by the Education Committee. Names of persons provisionally appointed to be sent immediately to the secretary for confirmation.

Managers have no power to dismiss a teacher without the consent of the Education Committee, unless such dismissal be on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school. Any serious complaint against a teacher to be investigated by a sub-committee, notice being given to the managers and the teacher concerned, in order that the latter may be present and the managers represented.

Coventry.—When managers in a Non-Provided School wish to appoint a teacher, they shall communicate his or her name and qualifications to the Education Committee, on prescribed forms, and the Education Committee will inform managers whether or not they consent to the proposed appointment.

When managers in a Non-Provided School wish to dismiss a teacher, they must make full representations on the subject to the Education Committee, and give their reasons; and if it is a case where the Education Act, 1902, recognises the right of the Education Committee to intervene, the Education Committee will inform managers of their assent or dissent.

If the Education Committee wish to remove a teacher in a Non-Provided School, on educational grounds, they will notify managers; and should managers within a reasonable time make any representations on the subject, the Education Committee will take such representations into due consideration before arriving at a final decision.

Glossop.—All vacancies shall be advertised by the Education Committee, who shall forward applications to the local managers, but any appointment made must be subject to the consent of the Education Committee. All advertisements shall appear in the Schoolmaster or Schoolmistress.

No notice of dismissal served by the managers shall be valid until the same has been approved by the Education Committee.

Teachers must send resignations to the managers, who must report same to the Education Committee.

Three months' notice shall be required by the Education Committee from the managers of the latter's intention to dismiss a head teacher on the grounds of religious instruction, in order that a full inquiry may be made with a view to satisfying the Education Committee that the managers are acting within the power given to them under the Act.

Gloucester.—The Authority, before giving its consent to any appointment made by the managers of a Non-Provided School, may require any one or more of the candidates to attend before the Education Committee, and may require production of the applications and testimonials of any candidates.

Kent.—On a vacancy occurring the managers shall at once give notice to the Secretary of the Education Committee, and shall take necessary steps for filling the vacancy at such salary and subject to such educational requirements as the Committee may specify. A form will be issued by the committee, upon which particulars of proposed appointment are to be made. No teacher is to be appointed unless this form has been received, and the committee's approval notified to the managers.

Managers may not dismiss or require the resignation of a teacher without previously obtaining the sanction of the committee upon a statement of the managers' reasons. In the case of a dismissal on religious grounds of a teacher in a Voluntary School, the correspondent shall at once report the dismissal to the Secretary of the Education Committee, and shall, with such report, send a full statement of the reasons for it.

Somerset.—A register of teachers will be kept at the County Education Office for the information of managers when requiring teachers, and in order to give teachers who have done good service in the county opportunities of promotion within the county. When vacancy occurs it is suggested managers should inquire whether a suitable teacher for the appointment can be suggested from the County Education Office. When managers apply for approval of the appointment of a teacher they must furnish full particulars or qualifications on form supplied, and must attach testimonials.

In all applications for the approval of the dismissal of a teacher, very full particulars of the reasons for such dismissal must be furnished. In every instance the teacher concerned will be invited to send a statement of his case to the County Education Committee.

THE TEACHERS' PROVIDENT SOCIETY

In connection with the N.U.T.

TOTAL FUNDS exceed - - £250,000.

ANNUAL INCOME exceeds £70,000.

Have you Realised that one out of every two Members who have joined the Government Superannuation Fund will reap no benefit from it, as the death statistics prove that at least 50 per cent. of the Teachers who have joined must die before reaching 65, the age at which the pension commences?

Have you Calculated

what a serious financial loss this will prove to your family or dependents, as a man joining at age 25, and dying, say, at age 60, would lose at least £105, as this amount would have been paid to the Government Annuity Fund, and in the event of death none of these contributions are returnable?

Have you been Informed that this serious loss may be guarded against by joining the Fund established by the Union, whereby, for a small annual (quarterly or monthly) payment, the whole of the contributions to the Government Superannuation Fund, together with all premiums paid to the Society, will be returned in the event of death before the age of 65?

Have you Decided to know more of this Fund? If so, SEND A POST CARD AT ONCE to the GENERAL SECRETARY, Teachers' Provident Society, 71, Russell Square, and full information will be forwarded by return of post.

Be wise! Provide in time, and you will be thankful in your later years.

SECTION X.

SALARIES.

Period of Payment.—It is the custom to pay the salaries of teachers in Public Elementary Schools monthly, such payment being made, as a rule, on the last day of the calendar month.

It is also the practice whenever the date for payment falls within a holiday period to make such payment on the last day upon which the school is open for instruction. This method is recommended by custom and convenience, It is very desirable, however, in order to avoid conflict with the Auditor, that the Local Education Authority should take power to make payment in this manner, either in the Memorandum of Agreement with Teachers or in some resolution of the Local Authority with which the teachers shall be acquainted, and which consequently can be read into their agreements.

Salaries Should be Fixed in Amount.—The Board of Education stated in the "Revised Instructions"—"Managers should consider whether it is wise to continue the custom of making the teacher's salary vary with the grant. The reason, which was not very satisfactory, formerly alleged in favour of this custom, namely, that it acted as a stimulus to vigorous exertion, no longer exists. Teachers, like other persons in steady employment, ought to know what salary they can expect."

Salaries in Elementary Schools are now but rarely dependent upon grants. But the recommendation that salaries should be fixed in amount retains its full force, and is specially applicable to those scales of salaries which are so framed as to leave the Local Authority complete discretion as to future payments, a discretion which for the teacher implies much anxiety. Naturally, improvements in salary are dependent upon the faithful discharge of duty, but given such service the salary should be assured.

In Secondary Schools under management determined by Scheme, the salary of a Head Master consists frequently of a comparatively small fixed sum and a capitation grant dependent on the number of registered scholars. The justification for such a practice disappears when Secondary Schools are brought under the control of a Local Education Authority. In such cases the funds necessary to cover expenditure are assured, and the Head Teacher can be freed from uncertainty, a fact which Local Authorities now generally recognise.

Assistant Teachers in Secondary Schools under management determined by Scheme, find the system of payment which generally prevails most objectionable. They ask for that regularity and certainty which generally exist in Secondary Schools under public control. Many Local Authorities have now adopted special scales of salaries for teachers engaged in the Secondary Schools under their control, and they sometimes make their grants to schools not under their control conditional on the establishment of satisfactory regulations respecting the teaching staff.

Scales.—With a few exceptions Local Education Authorities have constructed scales of salaries which provide for a fixed minimum, annual increments, and a fixed maximum for the teachers in their employment. Such scales apply as a rule to teachers in both Council and Voluntary Schools.

In a few instances scales are established for teachers in Evening Schools and Secondary Schools. It is evident that as the number of Secondary Schools under public control increases the practice of framing a scale of salaries for teachers in such schools will extend. In Evening Schools improved organisation under Section 34 of the Regulations of the Board of Education for such schools should bring about the establishment of regular payments.

Amendments of Scales.—The process of amending scales originally drafted soon after the establishment of Local Education Authorities continues. The following suggestions may therefore prove of service:—

(1) Elasticity.—Upon whatever basis a scale may be constructed the Local Education Authority will be well-advised in reserving power to deal with exceptional cases. Many serious objections can be urged against the far too common practice of making scales of salary depend mainly on the average attendance of the scholars.

(2) Small Schools.—Full recognition should be given to the fact that a small school requires the services of teachers of experience, and the labour of conducting such a school is often of a most exacting character. Full regard should be had to the position of those teachers who will work with but one or, at the most, two assistants, and who will be themselves not only responsible for the conduct of the school, but will be required under existing conditions to teach daily two or three small classes.

(3) Schools of Special Difficulty.—In certain districts the nature of the surroundings, the character of the children's homes, and possibly other circumstances, will make a school so situated far more difficult to work than one of average type. Such schools are usually known as schools of "special difficulty." Provision should be made in any scale for recognition of the exceptional difficulties which teachers in these schools have to meet.

(4) Grading Unjustifiable.—Certificates granted by the Board of Education are of one class. The many changes made by the Board in regard to their own examinations, and the variety of University examinations now also recognised for the purposes of the certificate, make it quite impossible to determine the relative values of certificates issued in different years. The Board of Education make no distinction between them. They treat them as all of one class. The practice which at one time prevailed of restricting the instruction of pupil teachers to those who held a certificate of a particular class has been abandoned, and the Board have gone so far as to declare that where Local Education Authorities who are administering a scale of salaries for teachers make a distinction between the rates of pay of those who were and those who were not so qualified under previous Codes to superintend pupil teachers, they would do well to revise such scale and adapt it to the conditions now laid down by the Board.

(5) Collegiate and Non-Collegiate Teachers.—Attempts have sometimes been made to differentiate between salaries paid to teachers who have studied in a training college and those who have prepared for their certificate by other means. A classification of this character cannot claim to be based on any satisfactory foundation. It is frequently most unjust, and almost invariably gives rise to unnecessary irritation.

(6) Large Areas.—Where it is intended to apply one scale to a wide area it should not be forgotten that even within the boundaries of one County the cost of house accommodation, and other living expenses, may vary considerably as between district and district. In France this is recognised by a marked difference in the subvention granted in lieu of house accommodation in different districts.

(7) Small Towns.—In Non-County Boroughs and Urban Districts which are autonomous for the purposes of Elementary Education, it is generally found that the local scale of salaries must be not less favourable than that which exists in neighbouring County Boroughs, otherwise there is naturally a drift of teachers from the smaller to the larger Boroughs. A similar selection is exhibited by students leaving Training Colleges.

(8) Mistresses (Girls' and Infants').—There is no good reason for differentiating between the salaries of Head Mistresses of Girls' and Infants' Departments. As a general rule the class teachers in both departments are paid at the same rate, and a large majority of the Local Authorities now pay Head Mistresses (Girls' and Infants') at equal rates.

(9) Previous Service.—The majority of Authorities make allowance for service rendered in Voluntary or in Board Schools within their area, and also recognise service which has been given in public Elementary Schools beyond their area. Such allowance is in the nature of recognition of experience, and enables Local Authorities to obtain the service of masters and mistresses who otherwise would not relinquish their present positions.

(10) Additional Payments.—University degrees and a third year of college training are often recognised by Local Authorities by a substantial increase in salary, but the practice of making additions for a variety of certificates in special subjects is open to objection, as it tends to create an impression that success as a student is of greater value than the application of thought and skill to the teacher's duty.

(11) Professional Training.—The importance of adding professional training to Academic equipment prior to recognition as a qualified teacher is generally recognised. The Board of Education have given notice that they will require as a condition of grant payment to Secondary Schools, that a certain proportion of the teachers in such schools shall have been trained. To meet the needs of the school and also to satisfy the requirements of the Board, Local Authorities are commencing the practice of paying Secondary School teachers who can furnish evidence of training in the art of teaching at an increased rate.

(12) Salary during Illness.—Subjoined are specimens of Regulations now in operation:—

Many of the most important Education Authorities have not considered it wise to make any special regulation for dealing with teachers absent through illness. They recognise that from the nature of his calling a teacher runs many risks from contact with pupils who may have contracted an infectious disease outside school. After illness, the period of absence from duty must often be longer with a teacher than is usual in other walks of life, owing to the evident necessity of protecting the children against risk.

On these grounds these authorities reserve to themselves the right to deal with all cases as circumstances justify.

Others have, however, considered it wise to make special provision.

Medical certificate required after absence for three days. Full pay is allowed to certificated teachers absent from duty in consequence of personal illness in accordance with a scale, under which the number of days of full pay to which a teacher is entitled varies according to the length of service, the number of such days being 1,080 after 45 years. This rule is, however, limited as follows:—

A teacher who has not more than 20 years of service may not be absent on full pay for more than 90 days during the three years preceding the last absence. A teacher with more than 20 but not more than 30 years' service is entitled to 110 in the three years, and with more than 30 years' service to 130 days in the three years preceding the last absence.

Holidays are not included. The Education Committee deal specially with prolonged absence after consultation with the medical officer.—London.

In case of absence through illness no reduction shall be made for the first month, and in special cases one-half or other portion of the salary may be continued for the second month, or in extreme cases for the third month.—Berkshire.

If a teacher is continuously absent through illness or any other cause for more than one week, the managers shall be at liberty to appoint some other person to perform the duties of the teacher, and may deduct from the teacher's salary such sum as shall suffice for the reasonable remuneration of such other person. Provided that where illness is the cause of such absence no deduction shall be made for the first three months in the case of a teacher who shall have been ten years in the service of the Authority, and none for the first month in the case of any other teacher.—Northumberland.

If the teacher be continuously absent from duty through illness or any unavoidable cause, the managers shall, subject to the approval of the Education Committee, have power to appoint a deputy. Provided always that there shall be no deduction from the teacher's salary in respect of such deputy, unless, in the case of a teacher of ten years' standing, he or she shall have been absent for more than three months, and in the case of a teacher of less standing for more than six weeks.—Leicestershire.

In case of teachers absent from school on account of illness, the following scale of payment shall be adopted:—For the first two months full pay; for the second two months half-pay; for the third two months no pay. The engagement to be automatically terminated at the end of six months' absence.—Staffs.

During illness one month's full pay will be allowed, then three months' half-pay, after which the Education Committee will specially consider the case.—Weymouth.

Salaries paid to teachers of five years' service in full two months; and half pay, two months. Teachers of under five years' service in full one month; half pay two months. Not more than four months in one year.—Cornwall.

Salary paid in full first month; half pay two subsequent months; after that it may be continued at discretion of the Authority.—Kent.

Teachers with less than three years' service, thirty school days; with more than three years' service, sixty days; but not more than ninety days in twenty-four consecutive months.—Nottinghamshire.

Full pay, one month; whole or part payment for subsequent period, according to merits of the case.—Oxfordshire.

Full pay for one month, and half pay for two subsequent months.—E. Suffolk.

Absence of Married Mistresses:—

In the case of married women sufficient notice should be given, and application made for a deputy to be appointed to carry on the work for a period of two months, which may be extended to three in cases where the doctor in attendance cannot certify that the teacher is fit to return to work. The salary will be paid as in cases of illness (e.g., full salary first month, half salary second, and in extreme cases third month).—Berks.

Teachers are required to notify to the Secretary and to the School Correspondent the date of their expected confinement at least three months before that date. They are required to absent themselves from school three weeks before the notified date, and must remain absent for a period of three weeks after their confinement. During the time of their absence they will be on half salary, and a substitute will be provided by the Education Committee. In all cases an absence of six weeks will be compulsory.—Bucks.

METHOD OF PAYING SALARIES.

Administrative Counties.—Generally the managers of a school, or of a group of schools, are required to recommend some person, to be approved by the Local Authority, as paymaster. On the last day of each month, a cheque sufficient to cover the salaries of all the teachers in that school, or group of schools, is sent to the paymaster, who is required to at once cash it, and pay the amounts due to the various teachers in the schools. Printed pay-sheets are sent to every school department, with the amount due to the teacher fully entered, and space for the teacher's signature. On receiving the salary the teacher signs. These pay-sheets are required to be forwarded by the paymaster to the secretary of the Local Authority within forty-eight hours of receiving the cheque for distribution.

In other instances pay-sheets similarly drawn are sent to every school department, and a cheque sufficient to cover the salaries in the department is sent to the Head Teacher thereof.

It should not be forgotten that in some rural districts teachers have difficulty in cashing a cheque large enough to pay the salaries of all the teachers in that department.

In Boroughs and Urban Districts.—On the last day of each month a pay-clerk, with the necessary pay-sheets fully prepared for the teachers' signature, visits the schools, and hands the salaries to the teachers, and takes back with him the signed sheets.

In other cases cheques are sent to the Head Teacher of every department.

In a few instances teachers have been required to attend at the office of the Authority to receive payment in cash. This method is most objectionable. The Local Authority have no right to ask the teachers to sacrifice their leisure in journeying to the office. It falls heavily on all teachers living far from the office, and no Education Authority would adopt such a plan if the members once realised what it means to a mistress, after a long day of toil in the schools, to journey some considerable distance after school hours, and before she is able to obtain a meal, possibly in wet, boisterous weather, to obtain the salary which she has earned, and which might with ease have been sent to her through the post or by one of the methods above-mentioned. It may perhaps with advantage be pointed out that more ill-feeling and discontent have been engendered amongst teachers by needless irksome regulations than by the labour they have undergone in the schools. Authorities who have tried the method have quickly abandoned it, owing to the great confusion it has caused in the office by attempting to pay a large number of teachers at one time.

The following are methods already adopted by Local Authorities :—

Bedfordshire.—Salaries paid direct to the teachers.

Blackpool.—Salaries paid by clerk in cash at each school.

Cheshire.—Pay-sheet sent to Head Teacher to fill in, counter-signed by Correspondent, and cheque for distribution sent to Head Teacher.

Devon.—A receipt form is sent to each teacher direct, which on being signed can be dealt with as if it were a cheque payable to order.

Gloucestershire and Cheltenham.—It is the duty of the Official Correspondent to fill in and forward to the Education Committee the Monthly Requisition Form, dealing with the expenditure of the school; to receive the monthly pay-sheets and cheque from the Treasurer; to pay the salaries and accounts specified in the pay-sheets; to obtain the necessary signatures and receipts; and to forward these without delay to the Treasurer, together with remittance of any cash that may have been received for sale of needlework, &c., &c., during the month.

Middleton.—Official goes round to all the schools, and hands each teacher a numbered envelope, containing the exact amount of teacher's salary in cash. The number corresponds with the number of the receipt the teacher has to sign.

Rutland.—Head teacher receives cheque monthly, signs receipt on form provided, and distributes.

Sheffield.—Cheque sent to each teacher.

Somerset.—Sum necessary to meet all payments sent to the Correspondent with a salary pay-sheet. Correspondent to make to each person payment specified, and obtain signatures. Pay-sheets with signatures attached must be returned at the earliest possible moment to the County Treasurer.

Suffolk (West).—Head Teachers are supplied with forms on which to set out each sum required. This is to be signed by the Correspondent and forwarded to the Education Secretary, who will send a cheque for the full amount to Head Teacher, who will pay salaries, get signatures, and return receipts within seven days.

Wiltshire.—Salaries paid to each teacher in cash at the nearest bank, by order of the Treasurer of the Education Committee.

SECTION XI.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORTS AND LOG-BOOK ENTRIES.

Though the subject of which this section treats may at first sight appear to be of but slight importance, yet there is abundant evidence that few incidents of school life cause teachers more anxiety. The knowledge that such reports are being called for, that they are confidential in their character, may never be brought to light, may contain some unwarranted accusation which years afterwards may be produced to the teacher's discredit, all this tends to paralyse the teacher's best energies, to create an atmosphere of mental worry, obscuring that clearness of mental activity essential to the rightful treatment of young children.

Reports by Inspectors and Head Teachers.—Officers of Local Education Authorities are sometimes instructed to furnish to that Authority, to the Education Committee, or to some Sub-Committee thereof, confidential reports upon members of the school staff. Certain Local Authorities also require the head teacher of schools under their control to report confidentially upon the conduct and capacity of their assistants. The object of such a practice is easily understood. The Local Authority desire to be assured at regular intervals that the teachers labouring in the schools are discharging their duties satisfactorily and efficiently, and merit the salary which the Authority have contracted to pay. This object is free from criticism, but the method adopted is open to such strong objections that it seems desirable to draw attention to the subject, in order that an evil which has already become great and is rapidly growing may be removed.

Intention of Local Authority.—It is probable that when Local Authorities ask for confidential reports they merely intend that these reports should not become public property. They wish them to be in the nature of that confidential communication which an employer has the right to call for, and which it may be the duty of a servant to make—a report which, if written in good faith and in the execution of a duty, would not make any of the parties to the report liable to an action at law. It is also probable that, when the members of a Local Authority decide to call for these reports, the idea that a member of the school staff may be the subject of such a report without his knowledge does not occur to those who seek to establish the regulation.

Evil Wrought by Want of Thought.—It seems only fair, however, that whenever a report is about to be made against any servant of the Local Authority that servant should be made acquainted with the fact and should have opportunity of showing cause why the report should not be made. Recognising that it would be unfair to pass judgment on the teacher without giving him the right of defending himself, some Local Authorities have decided that these reports shall be shown to the teacher after they are made; but this is not sufficient, and by no means satisfies justice. The teacher concerned may be able to put in a thoroughly satisfactory defence, he may be acquitted, the Authority may even come to the conclusion that the report ought not to have been made; but the memory of the fact that the teacher was reported upon, that he was the subject of some inquiry, will remain on the minds of all concerned long after the recollection of the result of the inquiry has passed away; and therefore, without any malicious motive on the part of any one concerned, serious injury may be done to the professional career of an unoffending teacher.

Warning to Young Teachers.—It seems also desirable that, wherever these reports are required upon the professional work of the teacher, the officer making the report should be expected to point out the defects in the work, and the circumstances which lead to dissatisfaction in order that the teacher concerned may have the opportunity of avoiding further complaint. The methods of one school are not always those of another. The regulations of one Authority differ from those prevailing elsewhere. The young teacher may be fulfilling the conditions which prevailed in the school he has left and be quite unconsciously acting at variance with the regulations which prevail in the school he has recently entered. This should be pointed out to him, and time for alteration given before the reports are made.

It seems also exceedingly unfair to require judgment to be passed upon a teacher after a period, say, of only three months' probation. With teachers fresh from college with high educational ideals, but a little out of touch with the practice of the schools, it may be that striving after an ideal, the over-zealous attachment to a theory, may prevent that teacher realising at once the aims of the school in which he is serving. To spoil his career by a report written prematurely is an action open to grave condemnation.

Conditions Governing Reports.—It would, therefore, appear advisable that reports adversely criticising teachers should be shown to the teacher concerned at the time such reports are made. He should then have full opportunity of defending himself, of taking a copy of the report so far as it concerns himself, and of submitting to the Authority with the report a statement of defence. Should the report then become the subject of inquiry the inculpated teacher should be present, and it may be desirable that he should have the assistance of a friend.

Is Frequent Reporting Necessary?—We suggest that the systematic writing of these reports is entirely unnecessary. It is undoubtedly the duty of the head teacher to report to the Authority responsible for the control of the school not only any serious failure of duty, but also any continuous, particularly if wilful, failure in comparatively small matters. Cannot the Authority take it for granted that, having appointed a head teacher capable and conscientious, it may safely be left to him to furnish these reports when necessary, and may it not therefore be assumed that when such a report is not received there is no reason for inviting the attention of the Local Authority to the conduct of the teaching staff? A similar argument may well be applied to the duty of any officer charged by the Local Education Authority with the supervision of schools.

Reports a Source of Anxiety.—It is not merely the private report in itself which is open to objection. The constant fear that the teacher may become the subject of such a report tends to paralyse his best energies, to create an atmosphere of dread in which he must live and yet try to work, and teaching is in itself sufficiently full of anxieties without having them needlessly increased.

Log-Book Entries.—What has been written above with regard to confidential reports sent to a Local Authority should apply also to entries in the school log-book. The head teacher should, on every occasion, be required to show these entries, at the time they are made, to the teacher concerned, to allow him to take a copy, and to present his defence to the Local Authority in due course.

Regulations.—Many Authorities have recognised the dangers and risks associated with confidential reports, and they have already declared that in the cases where the head teacher feels it his duty to report adversely upon the work or conduct of an assistant the attention of the assistant should be drawn to the points which are unsatisfactory. Such is the case in Leeds. In Walthamstow a regulation to the following effect has been adopted:—When making log-book entries re assistants, head teachers are instructed to show the entry to the teacher concerned, allowing such teacher to make a copy, and further, to forward a copy of the entry to the Secretary of the Education Committee.

Model Regulations.—With this object in view we submit the subjoined as a form of regulation which we would cordially commend to Local Authorities who desire to be furnished with confidential reports:—

> "Local officers and head teachers who comment adversely upon the work or conduct of any member of the teaching staff, either in an official report or log-book entry, are required to show the comment at the time to the teacher concerned, who may take a copy of the same and submit a defence in writing, which shall be attached to the adverse report, or noted in the log-book entry and filed for reference."

Several Local Authorities have framed their Regulation on this model, to the great satisfaction of the teaching staff, and this, too, without injuring school efficiency or diminishing local control.

Professional Approval. — The suggestions in this article have received the expressed approval of various professional organisations.

SECTION XII.

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

Importance of the Subject.—The character of the education given to future generations of scholars will be largely determined by the manner in which the student teacher of to-day is prepared for his work. From the standpoint of educational efficiency, this question of teacher-training is, therefore, one of supreme importance; it is of direct concern to those who contemplate placing their children in the teaching profession; and as the solution of the problem may involve large expenditure on professional schools and colleges, the subject is one which demands the anxious attention of the ratepayer.

Object of Training.—That those who are about to join the teaching profession should be well equipped for the duties they will have to discharge is generally recognised, but the nature of that equipment will to a very large extent depend on a right appreciation of the teacher's duty. He must be a good disciplinarian, and whatever may be the subjects he may be called upon to teach, it must not be forgotten that all his efforts must be directed to the cultivation of intellect, the development of faculty, and the formation of character. An adequate fulfilment of this great obligation cannot be expected from teachers imperfectly trained, and having regard to the tendencies which exist in certain quarters, it is necessary to emphasise the fact that a knowledge, theoretical and practical, of the teacher's art is as essential to the complete equipment of a teacher as academic success. It is not surprising, therefore, that Local Authorities regard with anxiety proposals which, in their judgment, will tend to weaken, if not destroy, those opportunities which every young teacher ought to enjoy of acquiring professional aptitude.

Old Methods.—At one time pupil teachers received the whole of their training, professional and academic, in the schools where they were apprenticed. This system was defective on the academic side, though under it many collegiate and even University students were trained: in fact, many of the most capable teachers now serving in Elementary and Secondary Schools were prepared under this method.

Under that now happily discarded system, a scholar stepped out of one class in a Public Elementary School to become the teacher of another. The supervision of his work as a teacher was often imperfect, owing to the inadequacy of the staff supplied to the school. His academic studies were pursued under the direction of the head teacher "out of school hours." At the close of the period of apprenticeship, he might enter a training college, or continue teaching in school as an ex-pupil teacher, obtaining at a later date the acting teachers' certificate. In the training college he met those destined to follow, like himself, a teacher's career. Throughout the whole period of training there was little or no escape from the atmosphere of the Public Elementary School. Skill was purchased by bitter experience, the training was solid, but could hardly be described as liberal.

Secondary School Preparation.—Educationists are now fully alive to the advantages which may be expected as the consequence of placing the intending teacher during some portion of his career within the atmosphere of a good Secondary School, and though this advantage is apt to be over-estimated, yet there is a common agreement in favour of proposals under which the boy or girl who may contemplate becoming a pupil teacher shall spend the years from the age of twelve to the age of sixteen in a well-organised school, following a course of education of a character more advanced than is permitted in the ordinary Elementary School.

Scholarships.—The manner in which students should be admitted to such a school calls for serious consideration. In the interests of the community, every facility should be given to promising pupils to secure that educational development which may enable them subsequently to render good service to the State. But whether the system under which scholarships and bursaries are now being granted is free from error is open to serious question. This, however, is a subject which it would not be desirable to discuss at length in the present Memorandum. There is, however, one phase of this question to which it is necessary to call attention. It is the practice of some Local Authorities to ear-mark certain scholarships for intending pupil teachers. This is a practice open to the gravest objection. Who can tell that a child, selected too often by competitive examination, at the early age of twelve, will, on attaining the age of sixteen, care to enter the teaching profession, or be a suitable subject for training as a teacher? Is it right to impose upon the parents of such a child a sort of moral obligation to bring the child at the age of sixteen to redeem the pledge given four years earlier? Changes in the position of the family, and the great development of the intellectual capacity of the child may make it clear that while the child may be qualified to repay the ratepayer by service in some other walk of life, yet he is totally unfit to become a school teacher. Nor is this the way to recruit a great profession. The dearth of teachers does not arise from difficulties in the way of entering the teaching profession, but is consequent on the low social recognition given in England to teachers in our public schools, the absence of any scheme of promotion within the field of public education, together with the totally inadequate salaries offered to highly-skilled experts discharging a difficult and important task. Recruiting may be encouraged by improving the position of the adult; it will not be accomplished by scholarships to children, and nothing could be of greater disadvantage to the schools than to place therein a number of young people with positive dislike for the work, brought in to fulfil a moral obligation from which they will escape at the earliest moment.

Apart, however, from this question of admission to the Secondary School, there can be no doubt that the pupil, particularly if he be brought from the Elementary School, will profit largely by contact with other students entering other walks of life. The years from the age of twelve to that of sixteen should be regarded as a period of general educational development. There is no question at this stage of professional training; indeed, the young student has not definitely determined upon his future career. He may or may not become a pupil teacher.

The Pupil Teacher.—It is eminently desirable that before he does become bound as an apprentice the intending pupil teacher should have an opportunity of showing whether he has any teaching capacity, and an equal opportunity of discovering whether he is likely to become attached to the work. This period of probation may well follow the completion of the Secondary School course, and it is obvious that it should precede any formal engagement as a teacher. While the necessity of some such trial is generally recognised, the difficulties in the way of securing it are not easily overcome. It is not desirable that during this period of probation the academic studies of the young pupil should entirely cease, and yet the greater part of his time should be spent in schools specially selected for this work, where the teacher-aspirant may work under the guidance of some well-qualified professor of education. It is possible that during this probationary period the pupil may remain upon the registers of the Secondary School, though under such a plan it is obvious that his attendance at such school will be greatly broken; he will not be able to follow any regular course himself, and it is probable that his irregularity will interfere with the progress of other pupils in the school.

The Professional School.—Is it, however, desirable that the intending teacher should continue as a student in an ordinary Secondary School? The pupil is now seriously contemplating a special career, one for which a definite form of training is necessary. He must not only become a man of liberal culture, but must, by long and patient study, become a skilled teacher. There is no greater mistake than that of imagining that any educated person can teach young children. That education is necessary goes without saying, but it does not give teaching skill. The problem before us is how to secure that form of training which shall combine both academic and professional development. The Pupil Teacher Centre system was established to improve academic equipment, while preserving professional training, and there is abundant evidence that the object is being accomplished. It would appear, therefore, that the proper place for the young probationary teacher would be the preparatory class of the professional school, commonly known as the Pupil Teachers' Centre. Such a school or centre might well be organised for a two years' course of training, coterminous with apprenticeship, preceded by a probationary period. During that probationary period the candidate might be rejected or might resign. He would not then be spoiled for other occupations, would not have drawn further education at the expense of the ratepayer, to whom he would subsequently render no service as a teacher. The percentage of failure amongst ex-pupil teachers would be smaller, owing to the weeding out which would take place in the probationary period.

Specialisation.—The pupil teacher has reached a stage when specialisation commences. He is following a course intended to lead to a definite result. This cannot be pursued along general lines, nor upon lines leading to a result of a totally different character. The Grammar School and the Girls' High School both have their place in our educational system. But neither can, with advantage to itself nor to the pupil teacher, absorb a number of pupils who ought to be trained in a professional school of a distinctly technical character.

Technical Training.—The pupil teacher has to pursue a technical as well as professional training, and there can be no doubt that, whatever arrangements are made for the future, it will be essential that the young teacher should spend a fairly considerable portion of every year in a school, acquiring by practice, and under the guidance of experienced teachers, some knowledge of the methods by which alone teaching becomes effective.

Can the ordinary Secondary School be organised to meet these requirements? Is it possible to arrange a time-table or draw up a syllabus on the assumption that a proportion of the scholars will attend full time, and the remainder, that is the pupil teachers, be absent for a period varying from one-third to one-half the year? The troubles of the half-time school are known to everybody. But it is better to have a school consisting entirely of half-timers than to have one in which a considerable proportion of the scholars are absent while the others are continuing the school course. Yet such must be the case if the pupil teachers are sent into an ordinary Secondary School. It is alleged that proposals to transfer pupil teachers to Secondary Schools are founded on the desire to avoid the evils of segregation, and, no doubt, the continuous segregation of the teacher throughout the period of training is to be greatly deplored; but a partial remedy is being found in the transfer of pupils from the Elementary School for a four years' course in a Secondary School prior to apprenticeship, and something more will be done as the university character of our training colleges is developed. But it is during the period of apprenticeship that the teacher of the future is made or spoiled, and this necessity for securing adequate technical training in the teacher's craft must outweigh the disadvantages of segregation during these years. And, further, if the pupil teacher be employed as a student teacher during part of his time in a Secondary School, the evils of segregation will be still further diminished.

But is segregation avoided by sending pupil teachers to a Secondary School? It is reported that in several cases where such transfers have been made the Secondary School has been compelled to adopt a form of organisation which has made segregation notorious. Separate classes, even separate play time, have had to be arranged, and the pupil teacher division is marked off as distinctly as though it were being maintained in a separate school.

In many instances the only Secondary School available provides for a school course which terminates for ordinary scholars long before the age of eighteen, and consequently the pupil teacher, if sent for training to such a school, will be left in the building after the other scholars have departed, forming a class alone. This will not remove the evil of segregation.

The Board of Education are probably wise in using the phrase "A Centre may be attached to a Secondary School." It appears to admit that the Centre cannot be an integral part of a Secondary School. Indeed the regulations of the Board declare that the Centre need not be "carried on in the same premises or under the same management." In these cases it is evident that the evils of segregation are not avoided.

For a Centre the Board require:

(a) A fixed number of attendances.
(b) An approved course of instruction.
(c) An approved leaving examination.
(d) An approved time-table and syllabus.
(e) Separate registration of pupils.
(f) An approved teaching staff.

These are conditions difficult to satisfy in an ordinary Secondary School.

Professional Training.—Nor can the Pupil Teacher Centre become a wing of the existing Grammar School. The Centre teacher is no doubt conscious of the fact that every lecture given to the pupil teachers assumes a form somewhat different to that which the same lecture would take if given to ordinary pupils, because the Centre teacher must always emphasise the methods which are adopted in teaching. The young teacher must be trained to adapt himself to the capacity of his pupils, he must be quick to appreciate the influence of home life and of local surroundings, and he will fail to acquire this attitude if he be trained by teachers who themselves are altogether unfamiliar with the nature of the environment of the Public Elementary School.

Leakage.—It is stated that the Treasury even now regard with some alarm the drift of young people out of the profession for which they have been trained, and Local Authorities have considered, and in some cases tried to enforce, methods for binding down the teachers to render service in the district which has been put to some expense in respect of their training. On educational and economic grounds these attempts to retain the teacher in one and the same district are most reprehensible. But the ratepayer and taxpayer may well ask that teachers who have been trained at the public expense should give, by effective service, some return for the money expended upon them. But is not sentiment a powerful factor in determining the teacher's career? Should he be allowed to lose touch altogether with the schools in which he will be expected to work? To take him from the Elementary School at the age of eleven and not allow him to return to, or even to experience, the educational atmosphere of the Elementary School until after he has quitted the training college would probably result in a much larger leakage than at present. This is a danger which, though founded on sentiment, is so very real, that it demands most careful consideration when determining the form in which the teacher shall be trained.

Co-Ordination.—The Elementary School will train the majority of its pupils for industrial occupations. A minority will pass to Secondary Schools capable of carrying forward the education of a child for about four years. These Secondary Schools will train towards the equivalent of a junior school certificate. Their pupils will then pass out into the world to work, or move to a higher grade of Secondary School, or become pupil teachers. In fact, a junior school certificate might easily mark the admission stage to pupil teachership. Taking the two classes of pupils whose studies are to continue, one will be following the course of an ordinary higher Secondary School, the other following the pupil teacher course. There is at this point a distinct bifurcation. The pupil teacher has begun to specialise, and the necessity for co-ordinating the various forms of Secondary School education will drive the institutions in which teachers are trained on to diverging lines.

Popular Control.—Pupil Teacher Centres, having, in many cases, been established by School Boards, have been transferred to the Local Education Authority by the Act of 1902, and popular control remains effective. New Centres would be in a similar condition. But the ancient Grammar Schools are by no means under popular control, and many of the new Secondary Schools, working under a body of Governors, will not be under popular control as effective as that of the ordinary Centre. Hence it would appear that should the Local Authority decide to send their pupil teachers to a school of that character, they will voluntarily deprive themselves of the control which they now possess over the training of their young teachers.

Success of Centres.—The Centres have been founded sufficiently long to enable them to be judged upon their merits. That they have been a distinct success is undoubted. The matriculation records, the reports of H.M. Inspectors, and above and beyond all the high position in the educational world now held by many teachers who have been trained in the Centres, form ample testimony of the good work which these institutions have accomplished. It would seem, therefore, very undesirable to bring to an abrupt termination institutions which have proved their value, in order to embark on a policy, the end of which must needs be most uncertain.

Secondary School Supply.—It is, indeed, not improbable that if Centres be closed down, in order that the pupils may fill the empty benches of some neighbouring Grammar School, the Local Authority may find before long that the educational requirements of the district can best be met by some modification of the curricula of the existing Secondary Schools, and that every seat in them would then be required for ordinary pupils. The Local Authority would then have to face either the question of building new Secondary Schools or of turning the pupil teachers out and reconstituting a Centre, after the elements which led to success had been disbanded.

In very few instances will it be found that the supply of higher education meets the prospective demand, and it should not be forgotten that, in matters educational, supply often produces evidence of latent demand.

It is probable that in urban districts all the places in existing Secondary Schools will, at an early date, be required for pupils who are not proposing to become teachers, for even in urban districts the existing supply of higher education is, as a rule, totally inadequate to meet prospective needs, and this probability amounts to a certainty in the administrative counties.

Official Pressure.—The importance of this question cannot be overrated; upon it depends not merely the training of the pupil teacher, but the future training of the children in Elementary Schools and the form which, ultimately, the supply of Secondary Education shall assume. It is not, therefore, a question which can be hastily decided—much must depend on local circumstances: and of these surely the Local Education Authority is the best judge. So far the Board of Education have laid down no general rule. Obviously, it would be undesirable that they should do so. But certain Officials of the Board of Education appear to have adopted for themselves a very rigid rule. There is considerable evidence of a tendency on their part to coerce Local Authorities into sending pupil teachers into Secondary Schools. It becomes the duty of the Local Authority to resist such recommendations where they are clearly at variance with the best interests of the locality. Only by independence of thought and resolute decision may the Local Authority hope to preserve professional training for the pupil teacher, and develop, on educational lines, a sound system of Secondary Education for those other pupils for whom specialisation is either not desirable or is required on lines which differ from those which should be followed by the pupil teacher.

In Rural Districts.—The problem of teacher training in rural districts presents peculiar difficulties. Neither the Secondary School nor the Pupil Teacher Centre can we hope to find within easy reach of the home of every child who desires to become a pupil teacher. Yet the village child should not be denied the opportunity of joining the teaching profession. A step will be made in the right direction when it is recollected that the village child need not of necessity be trained in the nearest village school. Indeed, the school nearest to his home may be quite unfit to train pupil teachers. In very many cases it will be, no doubt, necessary to bring intending pupil teachers together in some central school at a distance from their homes. The question then arises whether or not these young people should be required to travel backwards and forwards every morning and evening, or whether it may not be better to house them in the professional school from Monday to Friday each week, or even for whole academic terms.

It is on these lines that we may hope to find a solution of many of the educational problems which present themselves with peculiar force in rural districts.

The Training College.—Whether every male student should proceed to the acquisition of a University degree, whether our Universities might establish degrees in Pedagogy, what proportion of female students may be expected to travel along University lines, these are questions far too large for discussion in the scope of the present article. But while it may be admitted that the attractions of a University degree should not be allowed to interfere with the development of professional capacity, on the other hand, it cannot be too stoutly asserted that the creation of artificial barriers by either Central or Local Authorities in the way of the attainment of University distinction must be resisted with determination. The pupil teacher of the near future, with four years' training in a Secondary School and two years in a professional school or centre, should be well on the way with University work, and should have no difficulty in closing the training college career by acquiring a generally recognised mark of academic distinction, together with such further evidence of pedagogic training as may be required to start him in his professional career.

It is unnecessary at this stage to discuss the position occupied by either residential or day training colleges. Some of the difficulties associated with the admission of students to these colleges are being removed by the establishment of hostels.

In considering this question of college accommodation, it should not be forgotten that recent inquiries indicate that there are now sufficient college places for those who at present express their desire to enter a college. But these places are not distributed in proportion to the demand made by students professing different creeds, nor are the places now available sufficient to supply the number of teachers who ought to receive collegiate training. This is a phase of the question which urgently demands the attention of Local Authorities. The practice in certain districts of appointing ex-P.T.'s as uncertificated teachers, coupled with the continued existence of the acting teachers' examination, form a serious discouragement to professional training. The student who enters college has to forego salary for two years and submit to considerable restrictions and expense, whereas the P.T. who is retained in school enjoys freedom and salary, and whether the opinion be well founded or not, there is throughout the teaching profession an idea that at the present time it is easier to pass the acting teachers' examination than to secure success as a collegiate student. It would be unfair to disregard the practical training acquired by non-collegiate teachers during the years they are preparing for the acting teachers' examination. Yet such teachers would be the first to admit that considerable benefit is conferred on every student teacher who can manage to live within that corporate life which characterises a well-organised training college.

The Teacher's Certificate.—The conditions under which the teacher's diploma may be secured, even in the near future, do not appear to have yet taken definite form. It is said that the various examinations now accepted are being subjected to careful scrutiny. The result is uncertain. It is impossible within the scope of this article to suggest the form in which the present fluid elements should crystallize. Possibly one form alone may not be desirable. But whatever decision may be adopted, it is evident that care should be taken to keep the various examinations utilised for the purpose of granting the teacher's certificate at one recognised standard, and that a high standard.

A word of warning is necessary with regard to the demand for extra certificates. The diploma issued by the Board of Education should be based on such a standard of attainments as would qualify the holder for service in any State-aided school. The practice adopted, by certain Local Authorities, of asking for supplementary qualifications is to be deprecated as tending to create an over-estimation of academic training to the disadvantage of professional skill; and if such additional certificates are sought after the teacher enters upon school work they may stand in the way of a full discharge of daily duty. Indeed, the uncertainty with regard to the recognition of the teachers' certificate is one of those disabilities which make it difficult to attract young people to the teaching profession.

The Students' Declaration.—It has been the practice to require students entering a training college to declare that they propose to follow the profession of teacher in a Public Elementary School. The President of the Board of Education has, however, stated in the House of Commons that the Board recognise that it would be to the interests of education generally if this declaration were satisfied by service in any school maintained or aided by public money and local funds, in other words, that service in a Secondary School should be accepted by the Board of Education as sufficient recognition by the student of the obligation incurred by him in having part of the cost of his training provided out of public funds. This change brings an inevitable corollary. The State will at an early date, no doubt, have to face the question of training teachers who at the outset look forward to service in Secondary Schools alone. The additional financial burden would be but slight compared with the money already expended on the training of teachers, while the advantage of enlarging the recruiting-area, and of training candidates so collected together for common work, would increase the supply, simplify the work of Local Authorities, and greatly benefit the schools.

SECTION XIII.

PENSIONS TO TEACHERS.

Elementary School Teachers' (Superannuation) Act, 1898.

Be it enacted, etc. :—

Elementary School Teachers Certificated after Commencement of the Act.

1.—(1.) A teacher certificated after the commencement of this Act shall not be recognised by the Education Department as a certificated teacher until the Department are satisfied in the prescribed manner of his physical capacity.

(2.) In the case of a teacher who becomes a certificated teacher after the commencement of this Act, the following provisions shall, subject to rules under this Act, apply :—

(a) His certificate shall expire on his attaining the age of sixty-five years, or if the Education Department, on account of his special fitness, allow his services to continue for a further limited time, then on the expiration of that limited time;

(b) The teacher shall, while serving in recorded service, contribute to the

---

Sec. 1 (1). Certificated Teachers only.—This Act applies only to certificated teachers that is, to those teachers who are recognised under the Education Code as certificated for service in public elementary schools. Thus it does not apply to those who, are certificated for service as teachers of cookery, manual instruction, drawing, &c.

Sec. 1 (1). Commencement of the Act.—This Act "commenced" on April 1st, 1899.

Sec. 1 (1). Department's powers now exercised by Board of Education.—The "Department" does not now exist, but its functions and powers under this Act are exercised by the Board of Education.

Sec. 1 (1). Physical Capacity.—Evidence as to "physical capacity" is required for every person who applies for recognition as a certificated teacher. Such person must be examined by a medical officer nominated for the time being by the Board of Education. Lists of the medical officers so nominated for the time being can be obtained on application to that Board.

The examination must take place—

(a) in the case of a person who applies to be examined for a certificate, not earlier than the 1st day of April and not later than the 1st day of June in the year in which the second year's certificate examination is to take place.

(b) in the case of a person who applies to be recognised as a certificated teacher without examination (see Art. 60 (b) of this Code), within the time fixed by the Board of Education when the application for recognition is received.

Sec. 1 (1). Women teachers may now be examined by doctors of their own sex, for the purposes of the Act.

Sec. 1 (2). Medical Fees.—The Medical fee of 10s. 6d. has to be paid by the person applying for recognition as a certificated teacher.

Sec. 1 (2) (a). Special Extensions.—The Special Extensions are allowed only on the application of the Managers of the School in which the teacher is engaged.

Sec. 1 (2) (b). Definition of Recorded Service.—"Recorded Service" is defined by Section 1 (5) of the Act, together with Rule 9 of the Rules under the Act; and the effect of the provisions made therein is to include as recorded service service in the following capacities :—

(a) Of a teacher in a Public Elementary Day School (including Schools for the Blind and Deaf certified by the Board of Education, and Certified Efficient Schools).

(b) Of a teacher in a Training College ... ... } within the mean-

(c) Of an organising teacher ... ... } ing of the Code.

(d) Of a teacher of a Central Class for pupil-teachers ... ... }

(e) Of a teacher of a Central Class in any of the subjects in which the attendances of scholars are registered for the purpose of Article 12 (f.) of the Code.

(f) Of a teacher in a certified Reformatory or Industrial School.

Recorded service is also limited in point of the time during which it may continue; no service after a teacher attains the age of sixty-five years can be recorded service for the purpose of the Act.

Sec. 1 (2) (b). Payments by Teachers.—Every teacher, while serving in recorded service after April 1st, 1899, must contribute to the Deferred Annuity Fund (Section 1 (2) (b)); and he may contribute to it for a break in his employment which does not exceed six months (Section 6 (1) (a)). The rate of contribution at present is £3 5s. per annum for men, and £2 8s. for women. The contributions will in ordinary cases be deducted by the Board of Education from the grant due to the school or institution in which the teacher is serving; and the Managers have the power to deduct the amount of the contribution from his salary. "The receipt of the Board of Education for the amount of a contribution paid by the employer of a deferred annuity fund under this Act at the rate, if a man, of three pounds, and if a woman, of two pounds a year, or at such increased rate as may for the time being be fixed by the Treasury in accordance with this Act;

(c) On his attaining the age of sixty-five years, or on any later date at which his certificate expires, he shall be entitled, out of the deferred annuity fund, to such annuity for the remainder of his life in respect of his contributions to that fund as may be fixed by the tables under this Act, but he shall not be entitled to any return of contributions, or to any benefits in respect of his contributions other than that annuity;

(d) On his attaining the age of sixty-five years, or on any later date at which his certificate expires, if he has contributed to the deferred annuity fund, in accordance with this Act, and his years of recorded service are not less than half the number of years which have elapsed since he became certificated, the Treasury may grant to him, out of moneys provided by Parliament, an annual superannuation allowance calculated at the rate of ten shillings for each complete year of recorded service.

teacher, shall be a good discharge for the like amount of remuneration otherwise payable to the teacher." (Section 3 (1).)

Upon the teacher's attaining the age of 65 years, he will become entitled to such Annuity for the remainder of his life as is fixed by the Tables under the Act (Section 1 (2) (c)). The amount will depend on the number of his contributions and the various times at which they were paid; in order to ascertain it, the Tables should be consulted.

Sec. 1 (2) (b). No Return of Contributions.—It should be clearly understood that no return of any kind can be made for a teacher's contributions, unless he lives to the age of 65 years. The only return which can be then made is the annuity due to himself. Under no circumstances whatever can the teacher or his relations have the contributions or any part of them returned in a lump sum. On the other hand, however few or broken a teacher's contributions may have been, the annuity, to which they entitle him will be payable upon his reaching the prescribed age, whether he is then in recorded service or not.

Sec. 1 (2) (b). Contributions by Women Increased.—The rate of contributions by women was increased to £2 4s., by Treasury Warrant, dated December 26th, 1900, and to £2 8s. on 9th January, 1907, as it was found that since the passing of the Act their average salaries had been increased 20 per cent. The annuity awarded to women will be increased proportionately.

Sec. 1 (2) (b). Contributions by Men Increased.—The rate of contributions by men was similarly increased by Treasury Warrant, dated November 12th, 1904, to £3 5s., with a proportionate increase in the amount of annuity in the case of men.

Sec. 1 (2) (c). Amount of Annuity.—The tables at present in force are appended to this chapter on pp. 561-2.

Sec. 1 (2) (d). Annuity and Superannuation.—When a teacher reaches the age of 65 (if he does not obtain a special extension) he is entitled to an annuity and a superannuation allowance. But the annuity is payable, even if the teacher has made only one payment to the fund, while the superannuation allowance is only payable to the teacher whose years of recorded service upon his reaching the age of 65 are not less than half the number of years which have elapsed since he became certificated (Section 1 (2) (d)). Thus, a teacher, who at the age of 65 has been certificated for 44 years, must have served 22 years in recorded service, if any allowance is to be awarded to him. The years of service, however, need not be continuous, nor is a teacher obliged to remain in service up till the age of 65. As soon as he has completed the minimum amount of service required, he may, if he chooses, give up teaching. If he lives till the age of 65, the allowance due in respect of his recorded service will be paid to him.

Sec. 1 (2) (d). Rate of Superannuation.—This rate is different for two classes of teachers, those certificated before April 1st, 1899, and those certificated after that date.

For those certificated on and after the date named it is calculated at the rate of ten shillings for each complete year of recorded service. If he serves 40 complete years, he may thus be granted an annual superannuation allowance of £20 for the remainder of his life. Any fractions of a year over the number of complete years served must be disregarded.

For those certificated before that date the following is the mode of calculation:—

The rate of ten shillings is augmented in the case of a man by threepence, and in the case of a woman by twopence, for each complete year of recorded service served before the commencement of the Act (Section 5 (2) (a)).

The effect of this provision is that the allowance for each year of service in the case of an existing teacher is—

For men, 10s. + 3d. × number of complete years of service before 1st April, 1899;

For women, 10s. + 2d. × number of complete years of service before 1st April, 1899.

The annual pension due to masters at the age of 65 will thus be found by adding to 10s. as many threepences as years of service previous to 1st April, 1899, and multiplying the sum thus obtained by the total number of years of service, whether before or after 1st April, 1899.

The annual pension due to mistresses will be found similarly, 2d. being substituted for 3d.

To illustrate this scale, suppose a total service of 40 complete years, then the annual allowance

(3.) If at any time the Education Department find that the average salaries of the certificated teachers calculated in the prescribed manner exceed by ten per cent., in the case of men, one hundred and nineteen pounds thirteen shillings and threepence, or in the case of women seventy-six pounds eleven shillings and ninepence, per annum, they shall certify accordingly to the Treasury, and the Treasury may by warrant, in the case of either sex, increase the rate of contribution to the deferred annuity fund under this Act by an amount not exceeding five shillings a year for each full ten per cent. of the excess.

(4.) Any such certificate may be given, and warrant made from time to time, and if in any year the Education Department consider that the average emoluments have been so reduced as no longer to justify any increase of contribution made by any such warrant, they may certify the same to the Treasury, and the Treasury may cancel their warrant accordingly.

(5.) "Recorded service" for the purposes of this Act shall be such service in the capacity of certificated teacher in a public elementary school, not being an evening school, as is recorded by the Education Department, and may include such service as is so recorded in the capacity, within the meaning of the Education Code, either of a teacher in a training college, or of organising teacher, or of teacher of a central class for pupil teachers, or in such other capacity in or connected with public elementary schools as may be for the time being prescribed, or in the capacity of a certificated teacher in a certified reformatory or industrial school; but no service after the teacher attains the age of sixty-five years shall be recorded service for the purpose either of contribution to the deferred annuity fund, or of determining the amount of any allowance under this Act.

Allowances to Incapacitated Teachers.

2.—(1.) Where a teacher satisfies the Treasury in the prescribed manner that he:—

(a) has served a number of years of recorded service not less than ten and not less than half the years which have elapsed since he became certificated; and

(b) has not at the date of the application been for more than the prescribed time unemployed in recorded service; and which will be obtained will be the sum entered in the following table, according to the varying length of service before the 1st April, 1899.

Sec. 1 (3). Average Salaries.—The average salaries of certificated teachers are calculated for the purpose of the Act by dividing the total of the sums given in the returns made by the managers of schools to the Board of Education as the professional incomes of men and women teachers respectively by the number of men or women teachers in respect of which the returns are so made.

Sec. 1 (3). Increase of Women's Contributions.—See Note to Sec. (1) (2) (b), supra.

Sec. 1 (3). Increase of Men's Contributions.—See Note to Sec. (1) (2) (b), supra.

Sec. 1 (5). Recorded Service.—See Note to Sec. (1) (2) (a), supra.

Sec. 1 (5). Teachers in Poor Law Schools.—Service in Poor Law Schools for periods long enough to entitle to superannuation under the Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act is not "recorded" under this Act.

Sec. 2 (1). Disablement Allowances.—The Disablement Allowance is to meet the case of a teacher who before reaching the age of sixty-five years becomes permanently incapable, owing to infirmity of body or mind, of being an efficient teacher in a Public Elementary School (Section 2 (1) (c)). In order to satisfy the Treasury that this

(c) has become permanently incapable, owing to infirmity of mind or body, of being an efficient teacher in a public elementary school; and

(d) is not excluded by the prescribed disqualifications;

the Treasury may, subject to the prescribed conditions and to the provisions of this Act, grant to such teacher out of moneys provided by Parliament an annual allowance (in this Act called "a Disablement Allowance") not exceeding:—

(a) If the teacher is a man, twenty pounds for ten complete years of recorded service, with the addition of one pound for each complete additional year of recorded service; and

(b) if the teacher is a woman, fifteen pounds for ten complete years of recorded service, with the addition of thirteen shillings and fourpence for each complete additional year of recorded service; and

(c) in any case, the total annual sum which the teacher might obtain from an annuity and superannuation allowance under this Act by continuing to serve until the age of sixty-five years.

condition is fulfilled he must submit to a medical examination, which, save in exceptional cases, will be conducted by an officer nominated by the Education Department.

Sec. 2 (1) (c). Temporary Work.—"The Board has no objection to your occasionally taking temporary charge of a school." (Letter from Board of Education to Disablement Allowance holder.—Oct., 1904.)

Sec. 2. Application for a Disablement Allowance.—A teacher desiring to apply for a Disablement Allowance should communicate with the Secretary of the Board of Education, Whitehall, S.W., who will forward a form upon which the application must be made. This form is given in an appendix to this chapter, on p. 563.

Conditions upon which a Disablement Allowance will be granted:—

Sec. 2. An incapacitated teacher must satisfy the following further conditions:—

1. He must have served "a number of years of recorded service not less than 10 and not less than half the years which have elapsed since he became certificated." (Section 2 (1) (a)).

Thus, a teacher in whose case 20 years or less have elapsed since he became certificated must have actually served at least 10 years. If he has been certificated for 22 years, the minimum period of actual service which is required will be raised to 11 years; if for 40 years, to 20 years.

2. At the date of his application for a Disablement Allowance he must not have been for more than the prescribed time unemployed in recorded service (Section 2 (1) (b)). In normal cases, the application must be made within one year from the date of the teacher's last employment in recorded service, though an extension of this time may be granted under exceptional circumstances.

3. He must produce evidence to show that he is not subject to certain disqualifications (Section 2 (1) (d)), which are prescribed as follows:—

"(1) A teacher shall be disqualified for the grant of an allowance if he is not in pecuniary need of it, and shall be disqualified for a grant of part of an allowance if he is not in pecuniary need of that part.

"(2) A teacher shall be disqualified for the grant of an allowance if his infirmity has been wholly caused by his own misconduct or default, and if his infirmity, though not wholly so caused, has been increased by his own misconduct or default, shall be disqualified for the grant of such part of the allowance as the Treasury think fit.

"(3) A teacher who is a woman, and has married since her last employment in recorded service, shall be disqualified for the grant of an allowance."

Sec. 2. "Pecuniary Need."—The following official letter, dated April 7th, 1899, deals with the interpretation of this phrase:—"In the administration of the Elementary School Teachers' (Superannuation) Act, 1898, My Lords do not regard the words 'not being in pecuniary need' as applicable to a teacher on the sole ground that he or she has laid by some savings out of his or her professional income. They read the words as limited to persons who, from whatever cause, are so well off as to be obviously improper subjects for a compassionate allowance from the State. Similarly—unless in exceptional circumstances—My Lords consider that the fact of a teacher's husband or wife being in receipt of a professional income should not be taken into consideration in dealing with an application for a disablement pension. The only object of the above limitations is to guard against serious abuse in the administration of public funds."

Sec. 2. By a subsequent ruling, given in a letter from the Treasury, dated 31st July, 1905, My Lords have fixed £300 a year instead of £200 as the limit of other income possessed by a male teacher, or his wife or both together as removing need for the award of a Disablement Allowance.

Sec. 2 (1) (a). Amount of Disablement Allowance.—The amount of the annual allowance is thus calculated:—

(a) If the teacher is a man, twenty pounds for ten complete years of recorded service, with the addition of one pound for each complete additional year of recorded service; and

(b) If the teacher is a woman, fifteen pounds for ten complete years of recorded service, with the addition of thirteen shillings and fourpence for each complete additional year of recorded service.

Thus a man who has served twenty complete years before breaking down may obtain £30 as his annual allowance; and a woman, who has served the same period, £21 13s. 4d. Under no

(2.) If the grantee of a disablement allowance attains the age of sixty-five years, any annuity which would otherwise be payable to the grantee out of the deferred annuity fund shall, except where the allowance has ceased by reason of the grantee being again employed as a teacher in recorded service, be paid to the Treasury and applied as they direct towards the payment of disablement allowances, and in that case the Treasury shall not award any superannuation allowance to the grantee.

(3.) A disablement allowance shall be reconsidered by the Treasury at intervals not exceeding three years; and the rules shall provide for the suspension, cessation, or reduction of the allowance, in whole or in part, if the prescribed conditions are not complied with or the prescribed disqualifications apply, and those disqualifications shall deal with the cases of persons who have caused or increased their infirmity by their own misconduct or default, or who marry, or cease to be incapable, or become in such a position as not to be in pecuniary need of the allowance.

Collection of Contributions and Deferred Annuity Fund arising therefrom.

3.—(1.) The contributions under this Act from certificated teachers shall be paid to the Education Department at the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner by the teachers or their employers; and the receipt of the Education Department for the amount of a contribution paid by the employer of a teacher circumstances, however, can the Disablement Allowance exceed the total annual sum which the teacher might obtain from an Annuity and Superannuation Allowance under the Act, by continuing to serve until the age of 65 years.

Sec. 2 (2). Neither Annuity nor Superannuation Allowance to the recipient of a Disablement Allowance.—It should be observed, that a teacher who is in receipt of a Disablement Allowance is excluded from obtaining any other benefit under the Act. If he still retains his allowance at the age of 65 years, no Annuity or Superannuation Allowance can be paid to him (Section 2 (2)).

Sec. 2 (2). A teacher who gave up a Disablement Allowance calculated on x years of recorded service and returned to school work would, on attaining the age of 65, be entitled to a Superannuation Allowance calculated on the same x years of recorded service plus any subsequent years of such service which he may have made. (Official letter, Board of Education, 5th October, 1903.)

Sec. 2 (3). Suspension or Determination of a Disablement Allowance.—The Treasury can suspend, determine, or reduce any Disablement Allowance if, at any time after the grant thereof, whether on the periodical reconsideration of the allowance or not, they are satisfied that any of the following disqualifications apply, namely—

(a) that the teacher has ceased to be incapable, owing to infirmity of mind or body, of being an efficient teacher in a public elementary school;

(b) that the teacher has ceased to be in pecuniary need of the allowance, or of any part of it;

(c) that the teacher, if a woman, has married.

Any application on behalf of a teacher for the resumption of the payment of a Disablement Allowance which has been suspended shall be made to the Treasury through the Board of Education.

Sec. 2 (3). Triennial Reconsideration of Disablement Allowances.—A Disablement Allowance will be reconsidered by the Treasury every three years, when the teacher must produce evidence to show that he is still qualified to retain it (Section 2 (3), and Rule 24). If he is, then or at any other time, found not to be so qualified, or if he is guilty of misconduct, it may be suspended, reduced, or forfeited (Sections 8 and 10, and Rule 23 (1)).

Sec. 2 (3). Particulars to be furnished at the time of Reconsideration of a Disablement Allowance.—For the purpose of the periodical reconsideration of a Disablement Allowance, the following documents shall be sent by or on behalf of the teacher in receipt of the allowance to the Treasury through the Paymaster-General before the day for the quarterly payment which comes next before each completed period of three years from the commencement of the allowance.

(a) A certificate of a qualified medical practitioner stating whether or not the teacher is incapable owing to infirmity of mind or body of being an efficient teacher in a public elementary school;

(b) A statement of the teacher's income from all sources;

(c) A statement by the teacher, or in the case of his being of unsound mind or practically incapable of making the declaration, by some person on his behalf—

(i) that the circumstances of the teacher are such that he is still in pecuniary need of the allowance; and

(ii) that the teacher, if a woman, has not married during the period to which the documents relate.

Sec. 2 (3). An official letter, dated 18th April, 1904, states that a Disablement Allowance granted to a teacher in England is not necessarily forfeited by transfer of services to the Colonies, so long as the requisite evidence of identity and continued life is supplied to the Treasury.

Sec. 3 (1). Payment of Contributions.—

(a) Public Elementary Schools.—The Board of Education deduct from any grant payable by them to any public elementary school at the close of any school year an amount shall be a good discharge for the like amount of remuneration otherwise payable to the teacher.

(2.) The contributions so received by the Education Department shall be paid to the National Debt Commissioners, and be invested by them so as to form a fund, in this Act referred to as "the deferred annuity fund."

(3.) The National Debt Commissioners shall pay out of the fund to the Treasury the sums required by the Treasury for the payment of annuities under this Act, but otherwise shall invest the contributions, and all income of the fund for the time being, in any securities in which money held by the Commissioners on account of savings banks may be invested.

(4.) Separate subsidiary funds shall be kept in respect of the contributions and annuities of men and women teachers respectively, and any part of the assets of one subsidiary fund may be used for meeting the liabilities of the other, and in that case the amount lent by the one to the other shall be a debt bearing interest at the rate used for the computation of the tables for the time being in force under this Act.

(5.) A return showing the state of the fund at the end of every financial year, distinguishing the said accounts, shall be annually laid before Parliament.

(6.) At the end of every seven years an actuarial inquiry into and report upon the assets and liabilities of the fund shall be made under the direction of the Treasury and the Education Department, and the report shall be laid before Parliament.

Tables of Deferred Annuities.

4.—(1.) The Treasury shall cause tables to be constructed, showing the amount of annuity payable out of the deferred annuity fund to men and women teachers respectively in respect of the contributions made by them from time to time under this Act, and so framed as to secure the fund against loss.

(2.) If it appears from any actuarial report under this Act that the assets and liabilities of either account of the fund are such as either to require a reduction or to justify an increase of the annuities, the Treasury may cause fresh tables to be constructed, and those tables, when approved by the Treasury, shall come into force and shall be laid before Parliament, and the former tables shall cease to be in force, and so on from time to time as occasion requires.

Application of Act to Existing Teachers.

5.—With respect to the application of this Act to certificated teachers who became certificated before the commencement of this Act (in this Act referred to as "existing teachers") the following provisions shall have effect:—

(1.) The Education Department shall, in the prescribed manner, give to each equal to the contributions due from the certificated teachers employed in the school for that year, or any part of that year, in which they have been so employed.

(b) Training Colleges.—The Board of Education make a similar deduction from grants payable to the governing body of any training college.

(c) Reformatory or Industrial Schools.—The Secretary of State deducts from any grant payable by him to any reformatory or industrial school at the close of the year ending the 30th day of September, an amount equal to the contributions due from the certificated teachers employed in the school for that year, or any part of that year in which they have been so employed, and shall pay the amount so deducted to the Board of Education.

Sec. 3 (1). Teacher Entitled to a Copy of Receipt for his Contribution.—The Board of Education or Secretary of State, in forwarding any grant payable by them to the managers of the school or college, shall forward with it the receipt of the Board of Education for the deductions made, specifying separately the deduction made on account of each teacher, and the managers of the school or college shall, if required by any such teacher within one year of the receipt being so forwarded, give the teacher a copy of so much of the receipt as relates to him.

Sec. 4 (1). Annuity Tables.—The tables now in force are given at the end of this chapter on pp. 561-2.

Sec. 4 (2). Revision of Annuity Tables.—Up to the date of the issue of this volume no change has been made in the Tables issued at the commencement of the Act, but it is confidently hoped that experience will enable the Government actuaries to revise the existing rates in an upward direction.

Sec. 5 (1). Certificated Teachers to whom the Act cannot apply.—The Board of Education cannot now permit any teacher to "accept the Act." The option was given as provided in the Act, and the statute completely bars any acceptance after the lapse of the optional period, which expired on March 31st, 1900. This, of course, only applies to teachers who were certificated before April 1st, 1899; all those certificated on and after that date have no option, but are compelled to come under the provisions of the Act.

existing teacher the option, within the prescribed time, not being more than one year after the commencement of this Act, of accepting, in the prescribed manner, this Act.

(2.) If an existing teacher does not so accept this Act, it shall not apply to him. If an existing teacher does so accept this Act, it shall apply to him with the following modifications; that is to say:—

(a) The rate of ten shillings, upon which the superannuation allowance is calculated, may be augmented in the case of a man by threepence, and in the case of a woman by twopence, for each complete year of recorded service served before the commencement of this Act;

(b) If the teacher has at the date of the acceptance attained the age of sixty-five years, or any greater age, and has served in recorded service throughout the seven years next before the commencement of this Act, the provisions with respect to the expiration of the certificate shall apply as if the date of the acceptance were substituted for the date at which the teacher attained the age of sixty-five years;

(c) If the teacher has not at the date of the acceptance attained the said age, he must serve in recorded service after the commencement of this Act, and where, during any part of the seven years next before the commencement of this Act, he was not in recorded service, the duration of the recorded service after the commencement of this Act must not be less than the said part of the seven years.

(3.) Nothing in this section shall authorise the grant of any allowance to any teacher who at the commencement of this Act is in receipt of a pension out of moneys provided by Parliament for the service of education.

Rules.

6.—(1.) The Treasury and the Education Department may make rules for carrying into effect this Act, and shall provide thereby—

(a) for permitting certificated teachers to pay contributions to the deferred annuity fund during any interval not exceeding six months in which they are not employed in recorded service, and for reckoning the time in respect of which such contributions are made, as if it were recorded service;

(b) for the application of an annuity or allowance under this Act when payable to a person who is of unsound mind, or otherwise incapable of giving a receipt;

(c) for the suspension of all or any part of an allowance when the grantee is wholly or partially maintained out of any public money; and

---

Sec. 5 (2) (a). Superannuation Allowance for "Existing Teachers."—See note to Sec. 1 (2) (d), supra.

Sec. 5 (3). This section applies to those teachers who are in receipt of a pension under the provisions of Art. 130 of the Code.

Sec. 6 (1). Rules.—A copy of these "Rules" can be obtained from the Board of Education on application.

Sec. 6 (1) (a). Interval.—It should be noted that the word used is "Interval," and hence that the time must be between two periods of recorded service.

Payment of Contributions during an Interval between Services.—A certificated teacher shall be permitted to pay contributions in respect of any interval not being longer than six months between his employments in recorded service, and, where contributions are so paid in respect of any such interval, that interval shall, for the purpose of determining the amount of any annuity or allowance, be reckoned as recorded service.

Mode of Payment.—Where a teacher desires to pay any such contributions in respect of an interval, he shall, on resuming recorded service, give notice to the Board of Education that contributions are to be paid in respect of the interval, and the amount of contributions so due shall be added to the payment or deduction next made on account of contributions.

Sec. 6. (1) (b). Payment of Annuity when Annuitant is of Unsound Mind.—Where the Treasury are satisfied, by the certificate of a justice of the peace, or minister of religion, and of a duly qualified medical practitioner, that a teacher in receipt of an annuity or an allowance under the Act is of unsound mind, or otherwise incapable of giving a receipt, they authorise the Paymaster-General to pay any sum due on account of any such annuity or allowance, partly to the institution or person having the care of the teacher, partly for the benefit of the wife, husband or relatives of the teacher in such proportion and in such manner as the Treasury direct.

Sec. 6 (1) (c). Payment of Superannuation Allowance when Grantee is in a Rate-aided Institution.—Where any teacher is maintained in any asylum or other institution supported out of local rates, any sum due on account of a superannuation or (d) for the payment of any sum under one hundred pounds due on the death of a person without the production of probate or other proof of the title of the personal representative of such person.

(2.) All rules made under this section shall be laid, as soon as may be, before both Houses of Parliament.

Decision of Treasury and Education Department.

7.—Any question which arises as to the application of any section of this Act to any person, or as to the amount of any annuity or allowance under this Act, or as to the grant, refusal, suspension or cessation of any such allowance, shall be referred to the Treasury, and any question as to the reckoning of any service for any purpose of this Act shall be referred to the Education Department, and the decision of the Treasury or Education Department on any question so referred shall be final.

Forfeiture for Misconduct.

8.—(1.) Where the certificate of a teacher is suspended or cancelled by the Education Department, the teacher shall not be entitled to any disablement allowance under this Act unless the certificate is restored by the Department.

(2.) Where the Education Department certify to the Treasury that a recipient of any superannuation allowance or disablement allowance under this Act has been proved to them to have been guilty of any act or conduct which, if he had continued to serve as a teacher, would have justified them in suspending or cancelling his certificate, the Treasury shall suspend or determine the allowance in whole or in part.

As to Payment and Assignment of Annuities and Allowances.

9.—(1.) Every annuity and allowance under this Act shall be payable quarterly at such times, and payable and apportionable in such manner, as the Treasury may fix.

disablement allowance is applied towards the maintenance of the teacher before it is applied for the benefit of the wife, husband, or relatives of the teacher, and any sum due on account of an annuity is applied towards the maintenance of the wife or children (if any) of a teacher dependent on him before it is applied towards the maintenance of the teacher.

Sec. 6 (1) (d). Payment of sum under £100 without production of probate of deceased teacher.—Where on the death of any teacher any sum is due to his estate on account of any annuity or allowance under the Act, the Treasury, if probate or other proof of the title of the personal representative of the teacher is not produced to them within three months of the death, authorise the Paymaster-General to pay the sum due to, or distribute it amongst, the persons appearing to the Treasury to be beneficially entitled to the personal estate of the teacher, and the Treasury and the Paymaster-General shall be discharged from any liability in respect of such payment or distribution. Any person claiming to have a payment made to him under this provision must transmit to the Treasury, through the Paymaster-General, a statutory declaration showing the title under which he makes the claim, and such other particulars in relation thereto as the Paymaster-General requires.

Sec. 6 (1) (d). It has been obtained that where the grantee of a Disablement Allowance dies before the date of the first payment, the Paymaster-General will pay to the estate of such deceased teacher the sum represented by the period between the date of the allowance being awarded and the date of death.

Sec. 7. Departmental decisions of a final character.—Litigation as to the claim of any person under the provisions of this Act is prevented by this section, which renders final the respective decisions of the Board of Education and the Treasury.

Sec. 8 (1). Recall or Suspension of Certificate.—By Article 67 of the Day Schools Code, the Board of Education are empowered at any time to recall or suspend a teacher's certificate, but not until the Board have informed the teacher of the charges against him and given him an opportunity of explanation.

Sec. 9 (1). Mode and Time of Claiming Payment of Annuity and Superannuation Allowance.—A teacher who claims to be entitled to an annuity, must send to the Treasury, through the Board of Education, an application for the payment of the annuity, and, if he wishes for the grant of an annual superannuation allowance, for the grant of that allowance, and shall send with the application particulars as to his age and his years of recorded service since he became certificated.

As soon as the Treasury are satisfied that the teacher applying for the payment of an annuity is entitled to the annuity, they will direct the Paymaster-General to pay the annuity in manner provided by these rules, and send notice to the teacher, through the Board of Education, that the direction has been given.

The Treasury will, as soon as may be, through the Board of Education, send notice to the teacher applying for the grant of an annual superannuation allowance of their decision in the matter, and if the allowance is granted will direct the Paymaster-General to pay the allowance in manner provided by these rules.

A teacher making an application under this section must give the Treasury any information they may require in addition to the particulars furnished by him on his application.

(2.) Every assignment of, or charge on, and every agreement to assign or charge, any annuity or allowance to a teacher under this Act, whether payable presently or at some future date, shall be void, and on the bankruptcy of the teacher the annuity or allowance shall not pass to any trustee or other person acting on behalf of the creditors; but this provision shall be without prejudice to any order of the Court made under section fifty-three of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, or any corresponding enactment in Scotland or Ireland.

Punishment for Fraud and Personation.

10.—If any person—

(a) for the purpose of obtaining for himself or any other person any annuity or allowance under this Act, personates any person, or makes any false certificate, false representation, or false statement, or makes use of any false certificate, or document, false representation, or false statement, knowing the same to be false; or

(b) by means of any such false certificate, document, representation, or statement, or by other fraudulent means, or by any personation obtains or attempts to obtain for himself or any other person any annuity or allowance under this Act, he shall on conviction or indictment be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, and on summary conviction be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding twenty-five pounds, and any penalty under this section may be in addition to any suspension or determination of his allowance under this Act.

For the purposes of this section the obtaining of an annuity or allowance includes the increase of any annuity or allowance, and the prevention or rescission of any cessation or suspension of an annuity or allowance, and the obtaining of any sum in respect of any annuity or allowance.

Definitions.

11.—In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—

The expression "certificated teacher" means a teacher who is recognised under the Education Code as a certificated teacher for public elementary schools:

The expression "certificate" includes any document issued by the Education Department which recognises a teacher as a certificated teacher:

The expression "Education Code" means such Minutes of the Education Department as are for the time being in force for the purpose of the Elementary Education Act, 1870:

The expression "prescribed" means prescribed by rules under this Act.

Application to Scotland.

12.—In the application of this Act to Scotland the following provisions shall have effect:—

(1.) The expression "Education Department" means the Scotch Education Department, and the expression "Education Code" means the Scotch Education Code:

(2.) The expression "public elementary school" means a public or other school in receipt of annual Parliamentary grant:

(3.) Section one hundred and forty-nine of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1856, shall be substituted for section fifty-three of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883:

(4.) The Education (Scotland) Act, 1872, shall be substituted for the Elementary Education Act, 1870:

(5.) Nothing contained in or done under this Act shall apply to or affect any teacher of a public school in Scotland appointed before the passing of the Education (Scotland) Act, 1872, unless the teacher has accepted this Act in pursuance of the provisions of section five hereof:

(6.) It shall not be lawful for a School Board in Scotland to grant, under the powers conferred by section sixty-one of the Education (Scotland) Act, 1872, a retiring allowance payable out of the school fund to any teacher of a public school under their management who has accepted this Act in pursuance of the provisions of section five hereof, or to whom this Act otherwise applies.

13.—This Act shall not extend to Ireland.

14.—This Act shall come into operation on the first day of April next after the passing thereof, or on such day, not more than three months later, as may be fixed by Her Majesty in Council.

15.—This Act may be cited as the Elementary School Teachers' Superannuation Act, 1898.

Disablement Allowance.
E. S. T. (S.) A. 1898.

Form 2 (S.A.).

This Form is to be filled by an Applicant for a Disablement Allowance and returned to the Board of Education.

1. Name in full of Applicant, and Registered Number.
2. Age. (Give date of birth.)
3. Date when Applicant became certificated.
4. Give date at which the Applicant's paid service ceased (if it has ceased), or the date at which it will cease.
   N.B.—the case of the Applicant cannot be considered by the Treasury until the date of the actual retirement is definitely known.
5. State particulars of recorded service. (Only service since the Applicant became certificated should be entered.)

Name of School.*	County.	Date when service
		Commenced. (Day, month, and year.)	Ended. (Day, month, and year.)

* If the service has been in the capacity of an organising teacher or in any other capacity recognised under Section 1 (5) of the Elementary School Teachers' Superannuation Act, 1898, the particulars may be given in the above table.

6. State how Applicant became permanently incapable of being an efficient teacher.
7. If the teacher is a woman and has married,
   (a) give the date of the marriage, and
   (b) if her husband is living, state his occupation.
8. (a) What means of livelihood will the applicant possess besides a Disablement Allowance (if granted)?
   (b) Does the Applicant propose to follow any, and what, occupation if a Disablement Allowance is granted?*
9. If the application is made on behalf of a teacher by another person, the reasons for the application not being made by the teacher himself must be stated here. (Rule 15 (3).)
10. Name and address of Medical Officer by whom Applicant has been examined, and date of such Medical Examination.

I declare that the foregoing entries are true.

NOTE.—To be signed by the Applicant, or by the person applying on behalf of the Teacher. (See Section No. 9 above.)

* An exact statement should be given, showing the teacher's own private means, and whether they are derived from professional savings or otherwise; also, in the case of a married teacher, the means of the husband or wife.

SECTION XIV.

THE TEACHERS' TENURE OF OFFICE IN PUBLIC ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

1. TENURE IN NON-PROVIDED (VOLUNTARY) SCHOOLS.

Retrospective. Prior to the passing of the Education Act (1902) grave complaints were made throughout the country that teachers in Voluntary Schools were frequently removed from their office for reasons other than those connected with the work of the school, and these complaints became so urgent, that a Bill was introduced in the House, by Sir John Gorst and Mr. Walter Long, on August 2nd, 1902, to amend the law with respect to the removal of teachers in public elementary schools in England and Wales.

Under the provisions of this Bill, the Board of Education was constituted in effect a Court of Appeal against capricious or unreasonable dismissal, or where it was alleged that the teacher was guilty of personal misconduct; and the Board was empowered to reinstate a teacher or to require the managers to compensate him by a payment of money or otherwise.

The Local Educational Authority a Court of Appeal. The introduction of the Education Act of 1902, and the inclusion of section 7 (1) (c), which constitutes the local authority as a Court of Appeal, except where the dismissal is on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school, obviated the necessity of the Government proceeding with the special Tenure Bill. This is important, as it shows the intention of the legislature in requiring the consent of the authority to the dismissal of the teacher except on the grounds stated. The terms of the sub-section in question are as follows:—

> "The consent of the local education authority shall be required to the appointment of teachers, but that consent shall not be withheld except on educational grounds; and the consent of the authority shall also be required to the dismissal of a teacher unless the dismissal be on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school."

The word "consent" is important, as it appears that the consent of the authority should be given to the dismissal before the notice of dismissal can legally issue. It seems to be clear that approbation subsequent to a marriage is not in general a sufficient compliance with the conditions requiring consent (2 Jarm. 55; 12 R.R. 124; Vf Watson Eq. 1239). "Consent" is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing, as in a balance, the good and evil on each side (Story, s. 222).

It is clear, therefore, that an authority in dealing with any application by managers of Non-Provided Schools for their consent to the dismissal of a teacher should proceed in a judicial manner, and that both sides should have an opportunity of being heard by counsel or otherwise and of producng such evidence as may be necessary.

It is to be observed, further, that in dealing with the dismissal of a teacher the question of the teacher's certificate is frequently in question, and in the event of the decision to dismiss being based upon personal misconduct the result may be that the certificate is cancelled, and the teacher will henceforth be unable to obtain employment as a certificated teacher, as in such a case the Board of Education would strike his name off the register on the report of the managers.

Appeal to Board of Education. In the event of a dispute occurring between the managers and the local education authority then the question in dispute is to be determined by the Board of Education. In a recent case a local education authority endeavoured to reduce the salary of a teacher to an amount inappropriate for a teacher possessing the qualifications required for the post, and gave directions for the dismissal of the teacher concerned so as to permit the new arrangement to be made. On appeal by the managers, who disagreed with the proposal, the Board of Education formally ruled under section 7 (3) of the Education Act of 1902 that the local education authority were not justified in requiring the managers to dismiss the teacher because she declined to accept a lower salary than they would pay to another teacher possessing those qualifications, or in dismissing her themselves and appointing another teacher in her place. The Board of Education have large powers to compel local authorities to carry out their decisions, and in the case under consideration the Board intimated that they would not recognise any other teacher appointed by the authority to the school in question, and would withhold all grants from the school while such teacher if appointed was in charge.

Article 15. It will be seen that the two main grounds on which a teacher may be dismissed are (a) educational grounds and (b) grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school. These grounds have been narrowed down by the operation of Article 15 of the Code of 1906, which provides that all teachers must be employed under written agreements, except that, in the case of a school provided by a local authority, a teacher may be employed under a minute of the authority.

The Article provides as follows :—

"Teachers must be employed under written agreements, provided that in the case of a school provided by a local education authority a teacher may be employed under a minute of the authority.

(a) Any agreement or minute of appointment dated on or after August 1st, 1904, under which a teacher other than a pupil teacher is employed in a public elementary school, must include, either expressly or by reference to this Article of the Code, one or other of the alternative clauses set out below :—

The Board will not recognise, as part of the staff of a school or department, any teacher, other than a pupil teacher, unless this condition is complied with.

Clause (1).—The teacher shall not be required to perform any duties except such as are connected with the work of a public elementary school, or to abstain, outside the school hours, from any occupations which do not interfere with the due performance of his duties as teacher of a public elementary school.

Clause (2).—The teacher shall not be required to perform any duties except such as are connected with the work of a public elementary school and with the instruction of pupil teachers and probationers, or to abstain, outside the school hours, from any occupations which do not interfere with the due performance of his duties as teacher of a public elementary school or with the instruction of pupil teachers and probationers.

(b) Clause (2) must be included only if the teacher is required to instruct pupil teachers or probationers who are not receiving instruction in a Centre recognised by the Board. In other cases Clause (1) must be included.

(c) Sub-section (a) of this Article does not apply to marine schools or to schools which are attached to institutions in which children are boarded and lodged.

(d) The agreements or minutes under which pupil teachers are employed must be in accordance with the regulations for the instruction and training of pupil teachers."

Procedure. Managers who are desirous of giving notice to a teacher to terminate an engagement on grounds other than those connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school must first apply for the necessary consent to the local education authority, and in many cases already heard the following routine has been adopted with satisfaction to all parties concerned. Up to the present, indeed, the decision arrived at in every case has been accepted without demur as a final settlement of the question.

Dismissal on Educational Grounds. I. Procedure when managers desire to dismiss on grounds other than those connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school.

(1) On receipt of a request from Voluntary School managers that the local education authority should consent to the issue of a notice of dismissal, the Education Committee appoint a small sub-committee consisting of three or more members to hold an inquiry into the matter.

(2) The committee forward a notice to the managers and teacher concerned, informing them of the place, time, and date of inquiry, and invite their presence. A statement of the reasons alleged by the managers is forwarded to the teacher.

(3) Managers and teachers are permitted to bring such evidence as they may desire, and either party is allowed a representative.

(4) The managers appear either personally or through a representative before the sub-committee, evidence is taken and the teacher or his adviser makes a statement and submits evidence. The evidence is then considered, and the decision of the sub-committee is made known to both parties, and afterwards reported to the Education Committee.

(5) The proceedings of the committee of inquiry are private and privileged.

Dismissal on Religious Grounds.

II. Procedure when managers desire to dismiss on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school. In this case the consent of the local education authority is not required, but it is the duty of the authority to satisfy themselves that the dismissal is in fact given on such grounds. In such cases, authorities have found it convenient to hold an inquiry following the procedure indicated above (I.), and some authorities have further safeguarded themselves by adopting rules making it incumbent on managers to give due notice of their desire to dismiss on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the schools. The following rules are typical:—

(a) "The managers shall give the Local Education Authority... .....months' notice of their proposed intention to dismiss a teacher upon grounds connected with the religious instruction given in the school, together with full particulars of such grounds."

(b) "The consent of the Education Committee shall be required to the dismissal of a teacher, unless the dismissal be on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school, and notice of such dismissal shall be given to the Education Committee in order that they may be assured that the dismissal rests on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school."

(c) "In every case in which the managers have decided to terminate the engagement of a teacher they shall at once transmit to the Council a recommendation to that effect, giving full particulars of the reasons for their recommendation."

If on inquiry it is found, as a fact, that the dismissal is to be given on grounds connected with the giving of religious instruction in the school, the authority cannot further intervene. The managers may then issue a notice of dismissal, and the teacher must seek his further remedy, if he still feels aggrieved, in the courts in the usual manner.

The following form of notice has been found to be convenient:—

COUNTY COUNCIL OF _____.

_____ EDUCATION COMMITTEE (ELEMENTARY).

Notice of Local Inquiry.

An application has been received from the Managers of the _____ School for (the consent of the Authority to) the dismissal of _____, a teacher in that School.

An Inquiry will therefore be held at _____, on _____, the _____ day of _____, at _____ o'clock, by a Sub-Committee of the Authority.

A copy of the resolution of the Managers, and of the grounds alleged for it, has been sent to _____ by registered letter.

The Managers and _____ are invited to meet the Sub-Committee at the place and time mentioned, and to submit to them any evidence which they may think proper on the subject of the application. The previous general conduct of the teacher will be inquired into if necessary. The Sub-Committee will examine such witnesses as it may think necessary, whether requested by either party to do so or not.

It is hoped that the Sub-Committee will be furnished with full information on all matters bearing upon the case. In order to secure this the Inquiry will be strictly private and absolutely privileged. The witnesses, other than the Managers and _____, will not be allowed to remain in the room except during their own examination; and no one else will be admitted unless before _____, either the Managers or _____ have given notice in writing to the Authority that they desire to be assisted by a legal adviser. If any such notice is received, it will be at once communicated to the other party, and in that case a single legal representative, who may be either a barrister or solicitor, will be admitted on each side. Should the teacher not desire the presence of a legal adviser, the Sub-Committee may, at their discretion, allow the teacher to be accompanied by a friend.

The order of the proceedings will be entirely at the discretion of the Sub-Committee, who may either announce their decision at the close of the Inquiry, or reserve it for consideration. In any case, as soon as a decision has been arrived at it will be communicated to the Correspondent and to the teacher concerned.

It is earnestly hoped that neither before nor after the decision has been given will any personal feelings on either side be allowed to interfere with the harmonious and efficient working of the education in the school.

The Residence Difficulty.

Some difficulties have arisen as a consequence of the peculiar relationship established between managers, teachers, and local authorities in cases where teachers' residences are held by the managers and let to the authority for the use of the teacher. The amount of rent to be paid has been a frequent source of friction. When this has been settled further difficulties have arisen as to drainage, water supply, the provision of coal, gas, and oil, and disputes are of frequent occurrence as to who are liable for repairs, whether the teacher, manager, or local authority. In some cases managers have wished the teacher to remain as a tenant, while the teacher preferred to live elsewhere, and the managers have endeavoured to terminate the difficulty by asking for consent to the dismissal of the teacher. It is, however, open to local authorities to decline to accept any responsibility for the teacher's residence, and in that case an inclusive salary is paid to the teacher, who is left to make his own arrangements with the managers if he so chooses.

If the trust deed gives the trustees no power of letting the teacher's house, and if the local education authority are unwilling to rent it under the provisions of section 7 (1) (d) of the Education Act, 1902, neither the trustees nor the managers have any power of letting the house to the teacher or to an ordinary tenant. It is, however, competent for the trustees to apply to the Board of Education for a scheme authorising them to let the teacher's house, and giving directions for the application of any rent received.

The following is a typical scheme:—

Scheme for Power to Let Teachers' Houses.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

In the Matter of Certain Elementary Schools, in the County of _____

In the Matter of the Charitable Trusts Acts, 1853 to 1894; and

In the Matter of the Board of Education Act, 1899, and the Board of Education (Powers) Orders in Council, 1900 to 1902.

The Board of Education, in exercise of the powers conferred on them by the above-mentioned Acts and Orders,

Do hereby Order that the following Scheme be and the same is hereby established.

Scheme.

Administration of Foundations. 1. The foundations specified in the schedule hereto shall be administered by the trustees thereof in conformity with the provisions of the deeds respectively specified in the said schedule, as altered by this scheme.

Letting of Dwelling-house. 2. If the local education authority refuse to rent, under the provisions of section 7 (1) (d) of the Education Act, 1902, the teacher's dwelling-house belonging to the foundation, the trustees may (so long as the school of the foundation is conducted as a Public Elementary School) let the same as hereinafter provided.

In that case the trustees shall give the head teacher of the school the option of renting the said dwelling-house at a fair rent for such time as he or she shall continue to hold office.

If the head teacher declines to rent the house as aforesaid, the trustees may let it at the best rent obtainable to any other person for a period determinable by six months' notice expiring on any of the usual quarter-days. Provided that, if the local education authority agree with the managers under section 7 (1) (d) of the Education Act, 1902, to rent the house, the tenancy shall be determinable by three months' notice expiring on any of the usual quarter-days, and the trustees shall give notice accordingly.

The trustees shall require every tenant (other than a head teacher) to covenant that the house shall not be used so as to cause obstruction or annoyance to the managers of the school.

Repair and Insurance. 3. The trustees shall out of the rent received for the teacher's dwelling-house keep it in repair and insure it against fire.

Application of Income. 4. Subject to the payments aforesaid, the said rent shall be applied by the trustees for the maintenance (including insurance) and improvement of the schoolhouse of the foundation. For this purpose the trustees may, after providing for the purpose of the last foregoing clause, pay the balance of the rent to the managers of such school; and in that case the managers shall render a yearly account thereof to the trustees in such form as the trustees may from time to time direct. Provided that no part of the rent shall in any case be applied for those purposes of the school for which in pursuance of any Act of Parliament provision is to be made by the local education authority.

Minutes and Accounts. 5. A minute book and books of account shall be provided and kept by the trustees. All proper accounts in relation to the foundation shall in each year be made out and certified, and copies sent to the Board of Education in such form as the Board may require.

Interpretation. 6. Unless the context otherwise requires, any expression to which a special meaning is attached in the Education Acts, 1870-1902, shall have the same meaning in this scheme.

Questions under Scheme. 7. Any questions as to the construction of this scheme, or as to the regularity or the validity of any acts done or about to be done under it, shall be determined conclusively by the Board of Education, upon such application made to them for the purpose as they think sufficient.

II. TENURE IN PROVIDED SCHOOLS.

Transferred Teachers. Teachers in provided schools hold office direct from the local authority. Those who were formerly in the service of a School Board transferred to the local authority are "transferred officers" within the meaning of the Education Act, 1902. The Board of Education have ruled that by section 35 of the Elementary Education Act, 1870, teachers are among the officers which a School Board is empowered to appoint, and are therefore included in the officers referred to in Clauses 16 and 17 of Schedule 2 of the Education Act, 1902. Every officer so transferred holds office by the same tenure and on the same terms and conditions as before the transfer, and while performing the same duties is entitled to receive not less salary or remuneration than theretofore. If any such officer is required to perform duties not analagous to, or which are an unreasonable addition to, those which he was required to perform at the date of the transfer, he may relinquish his office, and he is entitled to compensation, as is every officer whose office is abolished.

New Teachers

There is no statutory provision for appeal by teachers in provided schools, but in view of the fact that much of the work of administration must be delegated, and that in serious cases not only the teacher's office but his certificate and means of obtaining a livelihood are at stake, it is clearly to the advantage of all parties that a procedure similar to that outlined above should be followed in all cases, and some of the local educational authorities have already formulated rules providing that this should be done.

The following regulations have been adopted by the London County Council with respect to complaints made against teachers:—

Regulations Respecting Appeals by Teachers.

(i.) In the event of any complaint against a teacher, or any misconduct on the part of a teacher, coming to the knowledge of an official correspondent, teacher or other officer, he shall at once report it to the executive officer (Education).

(ii.) When any complaint against a teacher, or any misconduct on the part of a teacher, is brought to the knowledge of the executive officer (Education), he shall forthwith notify the chief inspector (Education) thereof, and shall, after consultation with him, arrange for it to be brought before the managers of the school in which the teacher is employed.

(iii.) The managers shall inquire into the matter at the earliest possible moment, and shall forward a report to the executive officer (Education) together with any recommendation they may think fit to make. They shall also depute one representative to attend the hearing by the Teaching Staff Sub-committee.

(iv.) The chief inspector (Education) shall, unless the matter is of a trivial nature, either personally or by deputy specially appointed for the purpose, attend the meeting at which the managers hold their inquiry, and shall be entitled to take part in the inquiry, and to ask any questions with a view of elucidating the facts.

(v.) The chief inspector (Education) may, independently of the inquiry by the managers, make such investigation into the case as he deems necessary, in order to enable him to assist both the managers and the Teaching Staff Sub-committee in arriving at a just decision.

(vi.) It shall be the duty of the chief inspector (Education) in all investigations to make himself, as far as possible, acquainted with the facts of the case.

(vii.) When the charge of misconduct brought against a teacher is of sufficient gravity and of such a nature as to require the decision of the teaching staff sub-committee, such charge shall be made in writing in the form of a report by the executive officer (Education) giving particulars of the acts or defaults complained of, and the names of the persons who are able to speak to such acts or defaults, and containing (if he thinks fit) recommendations for adoption by the sub-committee. Such report shall be based upon a statement of facts prepared by the chief inspector (Education) after the investigation provided for in regulations (ii) to (vi.).

(viii.) A copy of the above report shall be sent to the teacher at least seven days before the day of hearing by the Teaching Staff Sub-committee.

(ix.) Within three days (or such longer period as the chairman of the Teaching Staff Sub-committee shall allow) the teacher may send in a written reply to the charge, giving the names of witnesses (if any) whom he may desire to call.

(x.) At the hearing by the Teaching Staff Sub-committee, which shall take place at a fixed hour and at an early period in the meeting, the chairman shall first read aloud the charge and the teacher's reply thereto; the chairman shall then examine any witnesses that appear in support of the charge, and the teacher shall be entitled to cross-examine them. The teacher may then call any witnesses whose names he shall have sent in prior to the hearing and other witnesses with the consent of the chairman. The chairman and any member of the sub-committee, and, with the leave of the sub-committee, the representative of the managers, and any other officer concerned, may ask questions of the witnesses. The teacher may then address the sub-committee, and thereupon the sub-committee shall deliberate in private.

(xi.) In serious cases the teacher, and, if necessary, the complainant also, may, with the permission of the Teaching Staff Sub-committee, be accompanied by a friend who, with leave of the sub-committee, but not otherwise, may address them.

(xii.) Whenever the Teaching Staff Sub-committee shall have resolved to recommend the dismissal or degradation of a teacher, a copy of the report which the sub-committee proposes to submit to the Education Committee shall be sent to the teacher, and he shall be informed that he will be allowed, if he so desire, to send in, within three days, a written statement, which will be submitted to the Education Committee.

(xiii.) When the recommendation of the Teaching Staff Sub-committee is presented to the Education Committee, and before the chairman of the sub-committee moves its adoption, the teacher's statement shall be read aloud by the clerk to the committee.

(xiv.) Nothing in these regulations shall prevent the Teaching Staff Sub-committee or the executive officer (Education) from suspending a teacher in the event of grave misconduct, or from taking such other action as may be necessary in cases of extreme urgency.

SECTION XV.

EXAMINATIONS FOR LABOUR CERTIFICATES AND AS A TEST OF SCHOOL EFFICIENCY.

Individual Examination.—For many years it was the practice of the Board of Education to test the efficiency of a school by the examination of every scholar in reading, writing, and arithmetic. The school was divided into so many standards or classes, and in each of these standards the scholars were supposed to exhibit at the examination a certain level of efficiency. Those who succeeded on the annual examination day were promoted to the next higher standard, and so on year by year. At one time it was considered that the progress of a child in this manner should bear an intimate relationship to his age. Thus, a child of seven was supposed to be able to pass the First Standard, a child of eleven the Fifth Standard, and so on. The system was proved to be exceedingly unsatisfactory, the results educationally and financially were deplorable, for labour and money were wasted. It was ultimately abandoned, and a system of inspection substituted.

Labour Certificates.—(a) Their Origin.—During the time that the above system was in operation it became the duty of Local Authorities, School Boards, or Attendance Committees to frame bye-laws under which the attendance of pupils at Public Elementary Schools might be regulated, and these bye-laws usually made provision for the exemption, either partially or wholly, of scholars whose parents desired to send them to industrial occupations. Under these bye-laws the Local Authority usually fixed the age at which the scholar might be so exempt, or as an alternative to the age or in addition to the age the Local Authority required the scholar to secure from an Inspector of the Board of Education a certificate showing that the child had reached a particular standard, the standard so selected being generally the standard which under the conditions which then prevailed the child was supposed to reach at the age specified in the bye-law.

(b) An Anachronism.—It will be observed that this method of exempting children from attendance at school was associated very closely with the old system of individual examination. This system of examination has passed away, but the old method of granting exemption for labour purposes survives. The Code Standards have disappeared, and for the purposes of the Labour Examination they have to be artificially re-created. The Day School Code roughly indicates in Schedule VI. a level of efficiency in reading, writing, and arithmetic which a child may attain. Should he in each of these subjects reach that level, the child is certified to have passed in a particular standard; if a higher level, then a higher standard.

(c) As a Test of Efficiency.—An attempt is now being made by a few Local Authorities to utilise these fragments of an obsolete system as a means of gauging the general efficiency of the school. The proposal is grotesque, the results fallacious, and the attempt positively injurious. Even in the days when the individual examination system prevailed, no educationist would have dreamed of selecting the results shown by the children who were proposing to leave under the Exemption Bye-Laws, and of weighing up these results as an evidence of the general efficiency of the school.

The children who were required by their parents to enter industrial life at an abnormally early age were usually those who throughout their school career had been irregular in attendance, oftentimes engaged in labour out of school hours, and thus to a large extent incapacitated for serious and continuous educational effort. They could never be regarded as a fair sample of the school. The results following their examination were never treated as an illustration of the general efficiency of the school. To make such an attempt to-day, now that the conditions of school life and methods of examination have largely changed, is ludicrous.

View of the Board.—"These examinations are not intended to be used for testing the general attainments of scholars in Public Elementary Schools, and candidates will not be admitted to the examination by the Inspectors unless the Inspectors are satisfied that they are presented for examination for the purpose of obtaining certificates of proficiency" (Code 1906, Schedule VI., Section 4).

The Object of School Teaching.—True education implies the formation of character, the development of intelligence, the cultivation of a child's faculties, the creation of a desire to improve; and all educational critics now realise that the best work of a teacher cannot be gauged by examination. Power to read with a certain facility may be tested by a visiting official, though even in this he may often fail to arrive at the truth, but whether that child has acquired a delight in reading would never be disclosed by the pupil's effort, limited to a few moments before a stranger. Mechanical accuracy, and even a certain power of applying mathematical rules, may be exhibited at an examination, but the intelligence of a scholar, his insight to mathematical problems, his power to apply the school teaching to the work of after-life—none of these will be shown with certainty in the three sums worked for an Inspector. The child may write a fairly good hand, may write a dictated passage comparatively free from error, and yet be incapable of putting into coherent language his own thoughts upon some simple topic of daily life. In fact, the individual examination may secure the husks but fail to obtain the grain of school cultivation. It would be monstrously unfair to judge of a school by the individual examination of even all its scholars, when such an examination is limited to the tests above described; and if it be unfair to try to form a judgment on such tests applied to the whole of the school, then how much greater is the injustice of estimating school efficiency by the standard examination of a few who have reached the age for school exemption. Results obtained by this method are clearly worthless, within them there is no particle of the best work done in the school. The spirit of school life cannot be reached by such clumsy methods. But the attempt is injurious. Teachers know how to obtain that glibness of reading, that mechanical accuracy in arithmetic, that absence of error of dictation; years ago they worked for such results and obtained them, and employers of labour to-day suffer the consequences. If the schools are to be so tested the teachers can so labour again, but it will be at the sacrifice of all that is best in the school, to the injury of the children, the waste of the funds supplied by taxpayer and ratepayer. Character and brain-power must go uncultivated if standard examinations are to be passed with ease.

Conflict of Methods.—It is impossible to reconcile the inspection methods of the Board of Education with this examination test. It cannot be too clearly stated that no school can work for both results at one and the same time, for the methods required are mutually destructive—one or the other must go to the wall, and if those who control and finance the school locally, who employ and can dismiss the teachers, insist on having the one, then the nation must lose the other. In school work quick returns and small profits are inseparable; the larger profit comes in after life, when the child is beyond the reach of the school examination.

The Use of Examinations.—It must not be assumed that educationists are opposed to all forms of examination. They have their uses, but "they are at best a concession to the weakness of the human memory and understanding. If everything we learned was immediately assimilated, placed in its right relation to the rest of our knowledge, and never forgotten, the purpose of examinations would be gone." (Suggestions for the consideration of Teachers, Board of Education, 1905.)

"The purpose of examinations is two-fold. They help alike the teacher and the scholar; the teacher uses them as an instrument to ascertain whether the instruction he has given is established in the mind of the pupil." (Ibid.)

It is obvious that an examination when the child is leaving the school will prove of no service to the teacher so far as that child is concerned.

"But examinations have been largely discredited by their mechanical use for the inspection of schools. The assessment of the Parliamentary Grant on the results of an examination which became more and more formal as the numbers of children in the classes increased led inevitably to cram. To put a pecuniary value on the success of a child giving correct answers to questions ranging over a precise and limited field was a sure way to destroy teaching, to weaken or destroy the interest of the pupil, and to misdirect the whole purpose of school life." Such is the deliberate view of the Board of Education as expressed in the "Suggestions to Teachers and Others." It is a declaration made on witnessing the deplorable results which attended the examination system during a quarter of a century. It is a pronouncement influenced by the overwhelming evidence secured from all parts of the country as to the value of the inspectorial system, which has happily prevailed during the last decade. It seems incredible that any Local Authority should, in face of a judgment so far-reaching, and yet so precise, seek to re-establish a discarded and universally condemned system.

Labour Examinations Should be Abolished.—The conclusion that the Labour Examination should be abolished is inevitable. Founded on an obsolete system, a survival now out of place amidst modern educational methods, the Labour Examination stands discredited, useless in itself, a source of injury to school life.

School Examinations.—The individual examination of scholars by a local Inspector, whether such examination be restricted to the upper classes or be extended to the whole school, is but an enlargement of the Labour Certificate Examination principle.

The imposition of such a test compels the adoption of school methods destructive of the higher educational work now encouraged by the Board of Education and annually submitted to review by their Inspectors. As stated above, school examinations have their proper place, but the practice may be easily so abused as to destroy all that is worth labouring for in popular education.

Where it is necessary that a scholar shall be furnished with some recognised evidence of having reached a certain stage of proficiency, a record of regular attendance at a good school, satisfactory reports by his teachers respecting conduct, intelligence, and general aptitude, will furnish far more reliable testimony than the child's success at a brief examination conducted by a stranger unacquainted with the children and imperfectly informed as to the course of study followed in the school.

Examinations in Secondary Schools.—There is no greater obstacle to the progress of Secondary Education in England than the necessity which at present exists of preparing the various pupils for a number of examinations. If the Universities and learned societies could be induced to accept one or two examinations of recognised standard in lieu of the several admission examinations now required the benefit to the children would be enormous. Those who are interested in this question may be advised to read a report on the subject prepared by the Consultative Committee and published by the Board of Education.

SECTION XVI.

THE REGISTRATION OF TEACHERS.

For the last thirty-five years various efforts have been made by associations of teachers to raise teaching to the dignity of a profession by the establishment of a register of teachers. Although the word "teachers" was never exactly defined, yet there existed a general understanding that it was intended to apply to persons qualified to teach in secondary and elementary schools, and with the majority of people it had a further limitation, in so far as they excluded persons who were not on the regular staff of such schools.

The subject was considered by committees and commissions, and abortive attempts were made in Parliament to bring about the establishment of a register. Outside the teaching profession the proposals received considerable support, in order that some means might be found of improving the teaching staff in secondary schools. It was generally thought that if a register were established it would be possible to provide that schools receiving State or rate aid should contain a certain number of registered teachers as members of the staff, and this would indicate that at least that proportion of the staff was thoroughly well qualified, particularly if a course of satisfactory training were a necessary precedent to registration.

By the Board of Education Act, 1899, the Consultative Committee then created was charged with the duty of framing, with the approval of the Board of Education, regulations for the establishment of a register of teachers. Effect was given to their recommendations by Order in Council. Slight modifications were subsequently made.

Appended to this note are the regulations as they exist at the present date.

It is, however, of interest to note that the regulations in their present form have failed to secure any wide measure of support from the teaching profession. Vigorous protests against certain of the provisions have been made repeatedly on behalf of the teachers in public elementary schools, while in many secondary schools the proposals were regarded with suspicion, if not disfavour. It became also exceedingly doubtful whether the decisions of the Registration Council would be upheld if challenged in a court of law, while it seemed probable that the action of the Board in connection with these regulations failed to secure the object which registration had in view. The whole question is one of extreme difficulty, and this was not fully disclosed until the attempt was made to frame detailed regulations. The Board of Education came, therefore, to the conclusion that it would be desirable to abandon the attempt, and a clause was placed in the Education Bill of 1906, whereby the obligation which rested upon the Consultative Committee to frame regulations for the establishment of a register would cease and determine.

During the discussion of this Bill in the two Houses of Parliament, those who believed in the possibility and desirability of constructing a good register redoubled their efforts. The prospect of losing the register altogether, or, on the other hand, the prospect of continuing the regulations in their present form, led to a renewal of effort amongst the leaders of the teaching profession to find some basis of general agreement.

As a consequence, the clause in the Bill of 1906 was amended by general consent, and it was agreed that while the obligation to form or keep a register of teachers under paragraph (a) of Section 4 of the Board of Education Act, 1899, should cease, yet it should be lawful for His Majesty by Order in Council to constitute a registration council representative of the teaching profession, to whom should be assigned the duty of forming and keeping a register of such teachers as satisfy the conditions of registration established by the council for the time being, and who apply to be registered. The register should contain the names and addresses of all registered teachers in alphabetical order in one column, together with the date of their registration, and such further statement as regards their attainments, training, and experience as the council might from time to time determine that it is desirable to set forth.

It will be noted that under this clause the council would consist of representatives of the teaching profession, that the classification of teachers in two columns as at present would disappear, that experience need not necessarily be acquired in some particular type of school in order that it should be recognised as qualification for registration.

With the withdrawal of the Bill this scheme fell to the ground. Consequently the regulations now being administered by the Teachers' Registration Council remain in force. Some teachers may desire to register under them, while others, including the various professional organisations, will continue their efforts to find a satisfactory solution of this problem in school organisation.

It has been considered desirable, therefore, to include the regulations as a section in this book of reference.

STATUTORY RULES AND ORDERS, 1903.

No. 384, as amended to March 1st, 1905.

Board of Education.—Teachers' Registration Regulations

REVISED UP TO MARCH 1ST, 1905, CONSISTING OF THE REGULATIONS FOR THE FORMATION OF A REGISTER OF TEACHERS ESTABLISHED BY THE SCHEDULE TO THE ORDER IN COUNCIL OF MARCH 6TH, 1902, TOGETHER WITH MODIFICATIONS MADE UP TO MARCH 1ST, 1905.

[NOTE.—Modifications made since the last revision are indicated by italics.]

1. As soon as may be after the establishment of the registration authority there shall be established a register of teachers which may be cited for all purposes as "the Teachers' Register" (hereinafter called "the register") in which the name of every registered teacher shall be set forth in alphabetical order.

In addition to this alphabetical list, there shall be two columns distinguished as Column A and Column B.

Column A shall contain the names of all persons for the time being recognised by the Board as certificated teachers under the code of regulations for elementary day schools.

Column B shall contain the names of all persons who fulfil the conditions of registration hereinafter set forth.

There shall also be recorded in the register in respect of each teacher, when registered therein, his postal address, the date of his registration, and a brief statement of his qualifications and teaching experience, in the following form :—

Alphabetical List.	Column A	Column B.	Address.	Date of Registration.	Qualifications.	Experience.

Additional qualifications and experience may be added from time to time when verified by the registration authority.

2. A person shall be entitled to be placed on Column B of the register of teachers if he satisfies the registration authority that he fulfils the conditions set forth in regulation three; or if he applies at any time within four years from the establishment of the registration authority to be placed on Column B of the register, and satisfies the registration authority that he fulfils the condition set forth in regulation four.

3. A person shall be entitled to be placed on Column B of the register if he fulfils the following conditions:—

(1) He must have obtained a degree conferred by some University of the United Kingdom, or have obtained a recognised degree conferred by some other approved University, or have obtained one of the diplomas or certificates mentioned in Appendix A to these regulations, or have attained some other approved standard of general education.

(2) He must either—

(i.) have resided and undergone a course of training

(a) for at least one year, or (b) for periods amounting altogether to not less than one year under circumstances which, in the opinion of the registration authority render the periods equivalent to a continuous year, or (c) in the case of a student who has taken honours in the Final Examination for a degree after spending four academic years at some University in the United Kingdom, for two terms at least taken continuously, at one of the Universities or Training Colleges mentioned in Appendix D to these regulations or some other recognised institution for the training of Secondary Teachers and have passed the examination for one of the diplomas or certificates in the Theory and Practice of Teaching mentioned in Appendix C to these regulations, or

(ii.) have passed an approved examination in the theory of teaching, have spent at least one year as a student-teacher under supervision at a recognised school (not being an elementary school), and have produced evidence of ability to teach, or

(iii.) have passed an approved examination in the theory and practice of teaching, and have spent at least five years as a student-teacher under supervision at a recognised school (not being an elementary school), where the Head Master has entered into an approved agreement with him for his proper training as a student-teacher, or

(iv.) have passed an approved examination in the theory of teaching, and have, with the sanction of the Board, undergone training at one of the Universities or Training Colleges mentioned in Appendix D to these regulations or some other recognised Institution for the training of Secondary Teachers, and served as a student-teacher under supervision at a recognised school (not being an elementary school), for periods which amount in the aggregate to not less than one year, and have produced evidence of ability to teach.

(3) He must, unless he has spent at least five years as a student-teacher under sub-section iii., have spent at least one year of probation as a teacher at a recognised school (not being an elementary school) and must satisfy the registration authority that he has shown fitness for the teaching profession.

4. A person shall be entitled to be placed on Column B of the register if at any time within four years from the establishment of the registration authority he makes application to be so placed, and fulfils the following conditions:—

(1) He must have obtained a degree conferred by some University of the United Kingdom, or have obtained a recognised degree conferred by some other approved University, or must show to the satisfaction of the registration authority that he has obtained one of the diplomas or certificates, or has passed one of the examinations mentioned in Appendices A and B to these regulations, or has attained some other approved standard of general education; and

(2) He must either—

(i.) have been engaged as a teacher at a recognised school or schools (not being an elementary school or schools)

(a) throughout the three years next preceding his application, or (b) for periods amounting altogether to not less than three years under circumstances which, in the opinion of the registration authority, render the periods equivalent to a period of three years next preceding his application, or

(ii.) have passed the examination for one of the diplomas or certificates in the theory and practice of teaching mentioned in Appendix C to these regulations, and produce evidence satisfactory to the registration authority of experience in teaching (other than teaching in an elementary school or teaching of a purely elementary character) extending over a period of not less than three years.

Provided that a headmaster or headmistress of a recognised school (not being an elementary school) shall be entitled on application to be placed on Column B of the register without fulfilling the above conditions, if the applicant has held the office for at least one year previous to the date of his application.

5.—(1.) The registration authority may place on Column B of the register the name of any person who does not fulfil all the conditions of registration but who, in their opinion, would have fulfilled all the necessary conditions but for the fact—

(a) that part of the period of his study or training was spent in an approved course of study or training at a foreign university, college, or school, or

(b) that part of the period of his study, training, or probation was spent in original research certified to have been conducted under proper supervision and to the satisfaction of the registration authority.

*(2.) The registration authority may, if they think fit, at any time within three years from the establishment of the registration authority, place on Column B of the register the name of any person who does not fulfil all the conditions of registration but who has either—

(a) in their opinion proved himself to be an exceptionally qualified teacher; or (b) has had experience extending over a period of not less than ten years of teaching (other than teaching in an elementary school or teaching of a purely elementary character), and has in their opinion shown ability to teach.

(3.) The registration authority shall report to the Board every three months the name of every person registered under this regulation and the grounds of his registration.

Supplemental Registers.†

6. There shall be annexed to the register supplemental registers of teachers of music, drawing, physical training, manual instruction, cookery, needlework, and such other special subjects as may be from time to time approved.

A person shall be entitled to be placed on a supplemental register if he produces evidence satisfactory to the registration authority—

(i.) That he has acquired special knowledge of the subject after a thorough course of training.

(ii.) That he is competent to teach the subject, and (iii.) That he has taught the subject for a period of not less than two years.

A person may be placed on one or more than one supplemental register whether he is or is not placed on the register.

The form of a supplemental register shall be the same as that of the register, except that Columns A and B shall be omitted.

7. A person whose name is placed on one or more of the supplemental registers, but not on either column of the register, shall not be entitled to describe himself as a registered teacher without also indicating the supplemental register or registers on which his name is placed.

Any person proved to the satisfaction of the registration authority to have wilfully so described himself, shall be liable to have his name removed from any supplemental register on which it is placed, and shall not be entitled for a period of two years to have his name placed on any register of teachers.

General.

8. In the case of any person applying to be placed on Column B of the register, or any supplemental register, the registration authority may, if they think fit, and after giving the applicant an opportunity of being heard, refuse to register him on the ground that his moral character renders him unfit to be employed as a teacher, or that he has been guilty of felony or misdemeanour, or, if he has been a teacher before becoming registered, of conduct unbefitting a teacher.

9. The registration authority may at any time remove from Column B of the register, or from any supplemental register, the name of any person proved to their satisfaction, and after such person has had an opportunity of being heard, to have been guilty of felony or misdemeanour, or of conduct unbefitting a teacher.

* Obsolete on March 6th, 1905.

† The establishment of supplemental registers is for the present postponed.

10. Every person applying and qualified to be placed on Column B of the register, or on a supplemental register, shall, before he is so placed, pay to the registration authority the sum of twenty-one shillings. A further fee of two shillings and sixpence shall be paid by a teacher registered on Column B before any additional qualification or experience is recorded on the register or any supplemental register.

11. No fee shall be payable for placing a person on Column A of the register, but if any person so placed applies to have registered any qualifications and experience other than those required by the Board from certificated teachers, he shall, before any such qualification or experience is recorded, pay the sum of two shillings and sixpence.

12. In approving or recognising a degree, diploma, certificate, examination, or other standard of education, for the purpose of Column B, or in recognising an institution for the purpose of training, or in approving subjects for a supplemental register, the Board shall act after taking the advice of the consultative committee.

13. The registration authority shall from time to time, and at least once every year, present a report of their proceedings to the Board, together with their observations on the working of these regulations.

14. The register and every supplemental register shall be published annually, and shall be open at any reasonable time to public inspection on the payment of the proper fee, and any person shall, on payment of the proper fee, be entitled to take copies of and make extracts from the register and any supplemental register, and to have delivered to him extracts from any such register certified by the registrar to be true.

The fees for the purpose of this regulation shall be such as may be fixed by the registration authority with the approval of the Board.

15. In these regulations—

"The Board" means the Board of Education.

"Approved" or "recognised" means approved or recognised for the time being by the Board for the purpose of the regulation in which the expression is used.

The "registration authority' means the body to be established for forming and keeping the register.

A "student-teacher" means a student in training for the teaching profession who does not count as part of the school staff, and in respect of whom a fee is paid, or some other definite provision for the expense of training is made, and in respect of whom approved provision is made for—

(a) Adequate opportunity for the study, under supervision, of the theory of education, including the principles of Teaching, Discipline, and School Management;

(b) Sufficient practice, under supervision, in the actual work of managing school classes and in the application of theory to practice.

Provided that a student-teacher in a school recognised for the purpose of Regulation 3 (1) iii., may receive a salary and count as part of the school staff.

16. These regulations may be from time to time modified and altered by regulations framed by the consultative committee with the approval of the Board.

THE Teachers' Orphanages.

PASSMORE EDWARDS ORPHANAGE FOR BOYS, SYDENHAM.

In these Homes the Orphan Children of School Teachers are maintained, educated, and trained to take their place in the world as good and worthy citizens.

SEVENTY-ONE BOYS and THIRTY-FOUR GIRLS were in residence during the year 1906, the cost of their maintenance being £3,347.

The Homes are supported by voluntary contributions, teachers themselves subscribing the larger portion, and every subscriber of Five Shillings has a vote in the election of children to the Homes, and in the election of the Governing Body.

THE MANAGEMENT is vested in a Committee of Subscribers, the charges for administration being reduced to a minimum.

No sectarian test is applied on admission, and the principles of religious freedom are carefully observed throughout the entire period of residence.

The Girls' Home.

All children are allowed to attend the services of the Church in whose faith they were brought up.

The atmosphere they breathe is that of a sound, healthy, home life, not that of an institution. Temperament and individuality are carefully noted, not only in the Home, but also with respect to the after-career that is provided, as far as possible, for each boy and girl.

The wealthy and charitably disposed public are earnestly asked to remember these most deserving Homes when dispensing their gifts of benevolence.

Further information, and a copy of the last Annual Report, will be gladly forwarded on application to

THE GENERAL SECRETARY,

The VIADUCT SERIES of

HISTORICAL CARTOONS.

An entirely New Series—each picture depicting the Central Event in an Epoch-making period of English History generally recognised as a LANDMARK IN ENGLISH HISTORY.

These Pictures are by a well-known artist; beautifully reproduced in sepia tints by the collotype process, the charm of the artist's work is fully retained.

These Pictures are of the greatest value as adjuncts to Oral Lessons, and the descriptive letterpress furnished with the pictures explains briefly the events which conduced to and the consequences that followed the particular event.

The first set, which is now ready, comprises—

Introduction of Christianity.
King Alfred and the Danes.
Battle of Hastings.
Signing Magna Charta.
Simon de Montfort and Provisions of Oxford.
John Wycliff and his Poor Preachers.
Death of Nelson.

The Pictures, all one size (27 in. by 35 in.), are supplied in three styles:—

(a) Framed and glazed in stained oak, with gilt slip ... ... each net 21/-
(b) Any Six Pictures in one Frame, stained oak, with hinged back-board to allow of pictures being changed ... ... per set, net 24/-
(c) Any Six Pictures mounted on cotton, and hung, from one roller, with slips ... ... per set, net 18/-

The VIADUCT SERIES of

PHOTOGRAPHS.

Twelve Pictures have been recently added to this Series, viz.:—

Lake Ullswater, Lake Killarney, Harlech Castle, Simon's Vat, Ilfracombe Harbour, Swallow Falls, Burnham Beeches, Castle Rock, Lynton, Stanford-le-Hope, Stonehenge, Celtic Bridge, Dartmoor, Ashdown Forest.

These pictures represent TYPICAL BRITISH SCENERY.

This Series now comprises Fifty magnificent Pictures.

The Schoolmaster says:—"The School Beautiful. The photograph now before us would grace any drawing-room in the land. At the price these magnificent photographs are simply marvellous."

Framed in oak (30 × 24 in.), with gilt slip and glazed, each, net 7/6.
Three for 21/-; six for 42/- net.

NOTE.—The prices quoted for the Framed and Glazed Pictures include the payment of carriage to any part of England, the EDUCATIONAL SUPPLY ASSOCIATION taking all risk of breakages and charging nothing for packing.
